333 BRITISH OFFICERS LOST IN NAVAL BATTLE

British Survivors Say German Dreadnought Hindenburg Lost —Germans Push on at Verdun

A list issued by the British admiralty today shows that 333 British officers were lost in the naval battle.

Latest reports received by the British admiralty are declared to show that the German losses in the Jutland naval battle comprised two battle cruisers; one, at least, and probably two battleships; four light cruisers, eight destroyers and a submarine.

Battle Cruisers Lost

British officers identify the two battle cruisers as the Hindenburg and the Lutzow, both of the latest type.

Another British Ship Lost

To the list of British vessels destroyed in the engagement the German admiralty adds the name of the British armored cruiser Euryalus. The British admiralty declares that the Euryalus was not in the Jutland engagement. It also denies the German claim that the British torpedo boat destroyer Tipperary was sunk on May 31 off the Humber.

Russian Success

What, apparently, is the expected Russian offensive on the eastern front, calculated to relieve the pressure on the Italians facing the Austrian drive in the southern Tyrol, and also that upon the French at Verdun, has been begun along the line from the Pripiet to the Rumanian border.

Russians Capture 13,000

Petrograd officially announces great successes for the Russians along this 250-mile front which comprises fully a third of the eastern battle line. The capture of 13,000 prisoners by the Russian forces is reported.

British Attack Brought Down

Regarding the fighting on the Verdun front today declares that the French have been making desperate efforts to recapture the ground lost recently to the Germans between Caillotte wood and Damloup, northeast of their fortress. Their attempts, however, were without success. Another British attack on the new German position southeast of Ypres, Belgium, is declared to have broken down under the fire of the German guns.

Germans Push On

There is virtually no let-up in the German effort to push back the French lines on the Verdun front northeast of the fortress.

Turkish Successes

The Turkish war office claims further successes against the Russian army operating to the west of Erzerum. The Russians, who recently were compelled to evacuate Manakhatum, 60 miles west of Erzerum, have been forced to retreat some 25 miles altogether, according to Constantinople, sustaining large losses in their retrograde movement.

Robbing Bubble Fountains

The latest thief to be added to the calendar of rogues in this city is the bubble fountain thief. The park commission added nine new bubble fountains to the parks and commons and it was stated this morning that the plumbing had been ripped out of no less than seven of them. The robbers are considerable enough, it was stated, to clog the pipes with sticks after taking what they want.

Lowell General Hospital

Mayor James E. O'Donnell has received an invitation to attend the graduation exercises for the nurses of the Lowell General hospital to be held Thursday, June 15, at 4 o'clock. The mayor is asked to address the graduates.

No Ball Game

The severe storm that came down the Merrimack valley early this afternoon converted Spaulding park into a veritable lake and caused the postponement of the Lowell-Portland game. The Portland players arrived in town and were already to leave their hotel for the ball grounds when the rain began. The team will remain here until tomorrow.

With Coco Woodman

A former Buffalo Federal league pitcher, ready to report for a try out, a game today would probably have resulted in a shake-up in the pitching staff of the local team. While Woodman failed to make good with Lynn his arm is said to contain some good stuff yet and if this is true he will make some of the pitchers who have yet failed to show anything sit up and take notice.

Injured in Collision

Moth Inspector and Mrs. Harris M. Briggs of Tewksbury had a narrow escape from death yesterday afternoon, when while riding in their motorcycle on the state road between Wilmington and Reading they were struck by an automobile. As a result of the accident Mrs. Briggs is now confined to the state infirmary in Tewksbury, suffering from a compound fracture of the right leg, while Mr. Briggs is confined to his home with a bad cut on the head and serious injuries to his right leg.

As far as can be learned, Mr. and Mrs. Briggs were returning to their home on their motorcycle yesterday afternoon and were riding over the state road. When they reached a spot about half way between Wilmington and Reading, they were run into by an automobile. The motorcycle was badly smashed, while its occupants were thrown forcibly to the ground. The couple were removed to the state infirmary in Tewksbury in the automobile that struck them. Mr. Briggs was able to return to his home in the evening. Mrs. Briggs, however, will have to remain at the institution for some time on account of the compound fracture of her right leg. Mr. Briggs does not care to make public the name of the owner of the automobile.

Collision in Tewksbury

Frank Daly of North Tewksbury yesterday while driving in his Ford machine was in collision with a Dodge automobile owned by a Mr. Tarbell of Lowell. The accident occurred at Tewksbury Centre near Fairglenes store. The little Ford was badly damaged and the Dodge also showed damage to the headlights and mudguards and various other parts of the mechanism. It appears that both machines became locked into each other in such a way that it was with great difficulty they were pulled apart. The occupants of both machines escaped injury although somewhat shaken up and badly frightened.

ALL UP FOR THE BIG PARADE

HON. JOHN JACOB ROGERS

Monster Preparedness Parade in This City on Flag Day Night

Congressman John Jacob Rogers Chosen for Chief Marshal

Parade Committee Busy at City Hall—Many Volunteers Heard From

The committee on Lowell's preparedness parade to be held on Flag day evening, June 14, realizing that it is going to have its hands full making the necessary arrangements in preparation for the day appointed is making busy on plans and if any stone is left unturned it will not be the committee's fault.

The parade committee met in the mayor's office at city hall this forenoon and elected Hon. John Jacob Rogers as chief marshal and Lieut. Thomas J. O'Donnell, chief of staff. The committee is waiting for volunteers. Its headquarters is in the mayor's reception room at city hall and if you want to volunteer or if in search of information call 295. That's the telephone number that will put you in touch with all that is going on concerning arrangements for the parade.

These on the parade committee are Mayor James E. O'Donnell, chairman; John H. Murphy, secretary; Miss Grace Cumback, Robert Marden, president of the board of trade; Lieut. Winfred C. MacBryne, John A. Hunnewell, manager of the Lowell Electric Light corporation; Hon. Joseph A. Legare, Collins Vandenberg, M. J. Sharkey and Warren N. Power of The Sun.

City Hall Employees

It was stated today that there would be a big turnout of city employees in the parade and that about all of the young lady clerks will participate. It was not stated who would lead the city hall girls in parade, but there were suggestions galore. There will be several delegations of ladies aside from the high school girls whose appearance in the streets a few days ago attracted the admiration of everybody who saw them and all organizations, men and women, desiring a place in the parade will confer a great favor on the committee by signifying their desires or intentions at as early a date as possible, for the undertaking is a big one and there are but a few days in which to accomplish it. The committee needs the co-operation of everybody interested in the parade and the committee will welcome suggestions from any quarter, the great desire being to make the affair a success from start to finish. Organizations sending in notices of their desire to parade will please state the number they will have in line and the name of the band, if any.

Whatever plans that have been thus far advanced are but tentative. But it is known that the parade will start at 8 o'clock sharp, presumably from the South common and the route of parade will be announced later. It is expected that there will be from 1000 to 10,000 persons in line. Only the American flag or state flags will be allowed in the parade, but devices may be carried showing the character of the organization.

The committee wants to emphasize that what it needs most of all now is co-operation. The last day and hour to file requests for assignments in the line of march will be Monday, June 12, at 1 p. m.

The mayor has had personal letters from several organizations expressing a desire for a position in the line of march. The Knights of Columbus will turn out in big numbers; the Lowell lodge of Elks will hold flag day exercises of their own during the day and will march in the parade in the evening. Other associations heard from by the mayor include Garde d'Honneur, C.M.A.C. and St. John's Temperance society of North Chelmsford.

Miss Cutler of the police department, acting secretary at parade headquarters in the mayor's reception room and she is a pretty busy girl. There is a deal of correspondence to be attended to and a great many organizations and individuals to communicate with.

It looks like a big day and a big night for Lowell. One can readily imagine the picture presented when thousands of men and women will march through the streets carrying American flags and other thousands watching from sidewalks, office windows or even on house tops, and all headed in the same direction. There will be no doubt as to Lowell's standing on the question of preparedness.

A Lowell man who viewed the Rhode Island preparedness parade in Providence, Saturday, said it was one of the grandest sights of his life. He viewed that parade, he said, and made up his mind that Rhode Island is for preparedness from the richest citizens down the lowliest laborer. All classes were in line and all classes carried the same day. It said the most charming feature of all was the human flag at city hall. The flag included hundreds of children and

MELROSE MURDER CASE

Boys Held for Hearing on June 14 —No Attempt to Secure Bail— Investigation Continues

MELROSE, June 5.—While Harold Shaw and Harold Mead, the boys detained in connection with the murder last Thursday of seven-year-old Letitia Walcott, were being arraigned in the district court at Malden today on charges of larceny, state and local police were engaged in investigating details of an alibi which Shaw claims. John H. Murphy, secretary of the city's assailants.

The boys pleaded not guilty through counsel to charges of larceny of ice tools, and were ordered held for a hearing in the juvenile session of the court on June 14. No attempt was made to bail the bonds of $500 required for their liberty.

The boys were apparently in a happy mood during the proceedings, notwithstanding two days of repeated questioning. Shaw insisted to police and newspapermen today that they were not concerned in the girl's death. Mead, who, according to the police, confessed to the murder when taken into custody in Boston Saturday, would not further discuss the conflicting stories he has told since. Because of his weak mental condition, they could not be still in doubt as to the truth of his statements.

Investigation today while concerned chiefly with the possible connection of the boys with the crime, embraced also other possible charges of responsibility and it was authoritatively stated that the general scope of the inquiry had not been narrowed.

BIG BOOM FOR HUGHES ROOSEVELT OUT OF RACE

Movement for Nomination of Justice Takes on Aspects of Genuine Boom at Chicago -- Arriving Delegations Tell of Sentiment for Jurist--Governor Whitman's Statement

CHICAGO, June 5.—The movement for the nomination of Justice Hughes today took on the aspect of a genuine boom. Delegations are sought of expected sentiment for Col. Roosevelt to crystallize. A week ago those who opposed the nomination of Roosevelt were fearful of a stampede to him, but now it is said that is impossible. Many cannot understand what brought this change about. Republican leaders after a canvass today declared that Col. Roosevelt's ultimate strength would not be more than 200 delegates at the outside, and they believe the number would be nearer 150.

It is asserted that the remaining 750 or 800 delegates would not vote for him under any circumstances. It was pointed out that when state delegations were selected it was habilitate the party and bring in the progressive strength. On every hand explanations are sought of the failure of expected sentiment for Col. Roosevelt to crystallize. A week ago those who opposed the nomination of Roosevelt were fearful of a stampede to him, but now it is said that is impossible. Many cannot understand what brought this change about. Republican leaders after a canvass today declared that Col. Roosevelt's ultimate strength would not be more than 200 delegates at the outside, and they believe the number would be nearer 150.

It is asserted that the remaining 750 or 800 delegates would not vote for him under any circumstances. It was pointed out that when state delegations were selected it was known that Roosevelt would be a strong factor and probably a candidate. Men were chosen who were believed to be for harmony, which leaders say is not synonymous with Roosevelt and are regarded, therefore, as not of the stampable type. The great mass of the delegates are uninstructed and are counted on to vote for any man who can bring a majority of the progressives back to the republican fold.

All talk of demanding a pre-convention statement from Justice Hughes as a condition of his nomination has practically been abandoned. It was being talked of last night but today it has been eliminated from the discussion. It is generally agreed that the

NATURALIZATION COURT IN SESSION HERE TODAY

Clerk Dillingham of Superior Court Busy Turning Out New Citizens of Many Nationalities

One of the busiest men in Lowell this morning was Clerk Dillingham of the superior court at the court room in Gorham street, where a naturalization court session was held with Justice Hamilton on the bench. The spacious court room was filled to the doors with prospective citizens of the United States and their witnesses, and business was rushed through with great speed.

The crowd that gathered in the court room at the opening of the court session at 10 o'clock this morning was a cosmopolitan one for no less than seven different nationalities were represented and Clerk Dillingham was kept very busy in having the various candidates swear off allegiance to foreign rulers and take the oath of allegiance to this republic.

The prospective candidates were placed on the witness stand and questioned by S. Anthony Church of Boston as to how long they have lived in this country, whether or not they were arrested and other questions pertaining to their character and good habits. On account of the candidates having been previously examined as to their knowledge of the constitution of the United States, this morning's examination was of a very brief nature. Among those who were naturalized this morning were Poles, Irish, Canadians, French, Greek, Italians and Assyrians, as well as a few Armenians and Slovaks.

The session was carried out through the afternoon.

BASCOM BLOCK DEAD AT WHEEL

One of Owners Denies Auto-Driver Killed When Reported Sale -- Say Machine Crashed Into No Truth in Story Tree

It was reported in a local Sunday paper yesterday that the Bascom block in Merrimack street had been sold to the Richard Hely Co. of Worcester and that the purchasing company would soon establish a branch of its business in this city.

Edward C. Bascom of Weymouth, one of the owners of the block, when questioned over the telephone by a Sun reporter this afternoon, emphatically denied the statement. He said the block has not been sold and as far as he knows no individual or company has any option on the property. Mr. Bascom requested the Sun to deny the statement, saying there is not the slightest foundation for it and such a report at this time is injurious to his business interests.

reached nearly to the top of the building. "It was the prettiest sight," he said, "or which I ever laid an eye on." The parade in Lowell on the evening of June 14 will not be for Lowell alone as it is expected that our neighbors will flock in to see what is going on and they may rest assured of a right hearty welcome. In the meantime the committee will be glad to receive the names of volunteers and to put in practice any feasible suggestion from the outside.

John Ward, who had made several appearances in court within a few months, asked if he could go to the state farm and his request was granted. Anna McKenna and Patrick F. Dowling were each sentenced to three months in jail.

Wedding Festivity Sequel

Louis Koslofski, Valentine Volka and Michael Browski entered pleas of not guilty to complaints charging them with being drunk. According to the testimony offered by Patrolmen John Sullivan and James Kennedy, the trio had been attending a wedding and about 12:30 o'clock they got into an argument in Howard avenue, off Davidson street. The trio used their fists and were creating a general disturbance when the officers put in an appearance. Two of the men were arrested and taken to about two o'clock yesterday morning the third member of the party was taken into custody. The defendants were found guilty and each was ordered to pay a fine of $5.

Sent to Sherborn

Marion Deveno who spent several days on an island in the middle of the Merrimack river in the vicinity of the car barn in First street, was called on continuance and after an official from the state board of charities stated that nothing could be done with the girl, she was sentenced here to the women's reformatory at Sherborn. The girl entered an appeal, but later withdrew it.

Assault and Battery

Michael Kuchorski pleaded guilty to assaulting Mattie Watson on May 13th. During the course of the testimony it was brought out that the defendant had slapped the girl's face at a wedding party, but claimed it to be accidental, but the girl did not think the same way despite the fact that she did not swear out a warrant against him until two weeks after the assault. She denied that she got the warrant out as a result of her brother being arrested on a complaint charging him with assaulting the complainant. The court found the defendant guilty, but inasmuch as it was not a serious assault he fined the defendant $12.

Case Continued

Walter L. Merrill and Eugene Lam-bro were charged with the larceny of a ring valued at $7.50, money to the amount of $2.20, neckties, each of the value of 50 cents and 400 coupons valued at $1.40, the property of Della Maloney. Each entered a plea of not guilty and at the request of the government the case was continued until Thursday.

BOY HURT ON BOULEVARD

A boy named Frank E. Norton of Manchester, N. H., was injured in an automobile accident near the pumping station on the boulevard about four o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was removed to the Lowell General hospital suffering from an injury to his spine and possibly internal injuries. The extent of his injuries will not be known until an X-ray examination is made.

NEWS FROM CITY HALL

MAYOR O'DONNELL ASKED TO HELP MAN FIND A WIFE HERE —BUBBLE FOUNTAIN THIEVES

There's a fellow by the name of Gus Jannell who is looking for a wife and if this catches the eye of any girl looking for a husband she can get all the details from the mayor, for we are not going to give Gus' address. Gus hates old maids and the lady whom he would extend the right hand of fellowship for better or for worse, must be very sweet and jolly. If she shows anything that would suggest an auto elopement, Gus will have nothing to do with her. Read his letter to the mayor:

Kind Sir:
Will you please give my address to a plain young widow who would like to correspond with a machinist aged 30. The lady must be sweet, slow, respectful and jolly. No old maids need write. I hate them.
Very truly,
Gus Jannell.

City Hall Meeting

The municipal council will meet tomorrow at which time it is expected that last steps will be taken in the Pawtucket bridge plans. There is a big raft of routine business to come before the meeting. The park commission will meet this evening and the school board Thursday evening. The dates for school graduations and other information concerning them will be given out Friday morning, after having been passed upon by the school board Thursday evening.

The New High School

Commissioner James E. Donnelly nearly slid off his chair when asked today if the wreckers, Swift and McNutt, would be out of Kirk and Anne streets in time for Architect Henry L. Rourke to get busy on the new high school. All of the buildings in Kirk street between the high school and the church have been razed and the wreckers will be out of there before July 1. It will be remembered that the wreckers asked for an extension of time because of the Day Nursery's delay in moving. The municipal council having granted the day nursery an extension of time representing a month or more. The matter of extension as far as the wreckers were concerned was left to Commissioner Donnelly and he gave them until July 1. "They will be out of there a good many weeks,"

Scores Those Who Claim U. S. More Vigorous With Germany Than With Great Britain

SHAKSPERE FESTIVAL IS 100 YEARS OLD RECLUSE DIED IN BED

MAYOR CURLEY INVITES PLAYERS TO GIVE SCENES OUT-DOORS IN BOSTON JULY 4TH

BOSTON, June 5.—Boston's Fourth of July this year is to be a combined celebration in honor of American independence from England and the literary genius of England—William Shakspeare.

Announcement was made from city hall last night that plans are under way for a mammoth outdoor Shakspeare festival to be held in Boston on the afternoon of July 4 and to be participated in by some of the greatest stage artists in the country.

In anticipation of the event Mayor Curley has already forwarded invitations to Robert B. Mantell, Miss Viola Allen, Thomas A. Wise, Genieve Hamper, Frederick Lewis, John Drew, Edward Vroom, Miss Henrietta Crossman, Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, Lyn Harding, William Faversham, James O'Neill, Mrs. Richard Mansfield (Beatrice Cameron), William H. Crane, Mrs. Julia Arthur Cheney, Miss Mary Shaw and Wilton Lackaye.

The following letter, written by the mayor and accompanying each invitation, tells its own story:

"The city of Boston is planning as part of the Shakspeare centenary observance a great out-of-doors performance of scenes from Shakspeare's plays for the afternoon and evening of July 4. The idea is to bring the genius of Shakspeare home to the masses as the great expression of the common mind and emotions of humanity.

"Beautiful and appropriate settings are available in our public parks and playgrounds and outside those of our public buildings which are noted for their classic architecture.

"In this unique and popular presentation of Shakspeare's works it is earnestly desired to enlist the cordial co-operation of those leaders of the legitimate stage who may find it possible to perform a bit of Shakspeare upon such an occasion as this which we know will attract thousands of people.

"Because you are one who recognize how deeply the stage is indebted to William Shakspeare, I have the honor to invite you to lend us the aid of your splendid talent in making this Boston celebration a superb dramatic success. I ask you to render whatever you may choose from Shakspeare and that you will favor me both with an acceptance of this invitation and notice of your choice of scene at the earliest moment.

"For whatever sacrifice you may make in this regard you may be assured of the immediate and constant appreciation of our entire citizenship."

GRAND OLD WOMAN OF WHITMAN CELEBRATES HUNDRETH BIRTHDAY

WHITMAN, June 5.—Mrs. Maria Witherell Reed, "Grandma" Reed, the oldest and surely the best beloved woman in all the Old Colony district, yesterday celebrated her 100th birthday together with her sons and every one of her direct descendants in five generations of the Reed family.

It was a wonderful day for Grandma Reed. But then she is a wonderful woman. It is said that only one person in 100,000 lives to know the wonders of a full century may bring forth still rarer are they who live to appreciate and use these wonders to their full extent. Grandma Reed, keen-minded, bright-eyed, healthful, and well informed by her constant reading on all matters of the day, was as keenly alive to all the joyous sights and sounds and pleasures of this centennial as were her jubilant little great-grandsons, to whom she dispensed candies and laughter in payment for their pranks with alarming generosity.

The people of Whitman Saturday tendered her a reception in connection with a church fair. Nearly 500 people came from all over the district from Brockton to Plymouth to greet her, and she stood up with a little old-fashioned bonnet such as the belles of 70 years ago carried and shook hands with every one of them. That was quite a task in itself, but she returned home and even refused to take a nap after her exciting celebration.

Then came the actual day, June 1, the one day in a hundred years, and with its sunshine came generation after generation of her children and children's children.

She lives with her eldest son, Clinton W. Reed of School street. More than half a century ago she sent him forth to the Civil war, and he is one of the very few Grand Army veterans whose mother is now living.

Her other sons, Nahum S. Reed and Frank A. Reed of Brockton, appeared, proud of their mother as never before and bearing the heritage of her strength and health. Her grandsons, Nahum Reed and Carl A. Reed, came from their nearby homes in Whitman. Dwight Reed of Melrose completed the roster. The great-grandchildren included Fred S. Reed of Plymouth, Howard C. Reed and Ida M. Reed of Whitman. Fred Reed brought his children, her great-grandchildren, Harrison E. Hinton L. and Beatrice Eleanor Reed. Beatrice is just six weeks old, and her presence completed the family tree to its topmost twig. Every one of Mrs. Reed's direct descendants was present.

It was a distinguished gathering for Mrs. Reed herself is a direct descendant of John Alden and Priscilla.

SEARCHERS FOUND DEEDS WORTH $30,000 AND BANK-BOOKS REPRESENTING $20,000

HAVENHILL, June 5.—Worried because they had not seen Patrick McBride a wealthy recluse, since Monday, neighbors yesterday battered in the doors of his house on Kenosia avenue and found him dead in bed. They found notes and deeds to property valued at $30,000 and bankbooks that represented at least $20,000 more in their search of the house.

He has no known relative living and the body was sent to the Linwood cemetery tomb after Medical Examiner John F. Croston had pronounced death due to natural causes. The burial will take place on Tuesday unless his body is claimed before that time.

WOMEN'S GOLF TOURNAMENT
MANCHESTER, Mass., June 5.—Prominent women golfers gathered at the Essex County club today for the opening play in the Women's Eastern Golf association championship tournament. Fifty-two players were entered, including Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, who has held the title three times; Miss Vera Ramsey, Miss Harriet S. Curtis, Miss G. M. Bishop, Mrs. C. F. Fox and Miss Florence McNeely. Mrs. H. G. Vanderveck, the present champion, was unable to compete because of illness.

THE BRITISH HELMET

LONDON, June 5.—The value of the helmets which are now being supplied to the British troops at the front is indicated in an article in the current issue of the British Medical Journal which says that in a big fight where the Britishers were wearing the new helmets the number of penetrating gunshot wounds of the head was equal to less than one-half of one per cent, and the total number of fractures of the skull was under one per cent of all casualties, and the latest data show that, in trench fights at least, the percentage is as high as 25.

"The British helmet," the Journal explains, "protects the side and back of the neck and the temples and the upper part of the face as well, of course, as the top and sides of the head. It has a smooth round top. It stands away from the head about one-third of an inch all around, the weight being away from a padded leather band fixed to the inner side of the surrounding steel by a series of India rubber buffers, each about the thickness of a lead pencil and about one inch long. This detail of construction constitutes perhaps the most important difference between the British and French helmets. The buffers are capable of diffusing and neutralizing the force of a blow which, falling on the closely fitted French helmet, would be conducted direct to the brain-pan."

THE DUBLIN REVOLT

INTERESTING STORY TOLD BY MILITARY OFFICER WHO WAS MADE PRISONER AFTER OUTBREAK

The following story of a prisoner arrested by the Sinn Fein rebels in Dublin is taken from an Irish paper, the Irish Independent, and is of interest as giving an inside view of the trouble.

Col. R. K. Brereton, J.P., Ladywell, Athlone, formerly of the Royal Irish regiment, having been interviewed by our representatives, gives us the following interesting account of his experiences in Dublin during the recent disturbances:

On Monday, 24th April, accompanied by my chauffeur, I entered Dublin, entering the city through Phoenix park about 4 p.m. Everything was very quiet, very few people about; no one stopped me or gave any hint of unusual occurrences. I noticed on the quay that there were no police or military to be seen and that the trams were not running. Coming round a curve near the four Courts I was stopped by a barricade, made of carts and heavy furniture. Two young men in picturesque green uniforms with rifles and fixed bayonets held me up and informed me that I was their prisoner. I asked what was up. My captor informed me that war was declared. "With the whom?" I replied. "With the British." After parading for a little he pointed his bayonet at my chest and said I must go to his captain. On the way he informed me that his party held the castle, the bank, the postoffice and in fact all the public buildings; that three contingents of Germans were landing in Dublin, and that the Irish regiments had refused to turn out. Inside the courts I was received by Captain Fahy, who refused to let me or the chauffeur go. I found one officer in uniform (who happened to be passing through Dublin) a prisoner before me. There were about 20 men, mostly in plain clothes, at the back entrance to the courts. Rifles and ammunition were being issued to them and some were being shown the breach action of the rifles. One shot went off accidentally within the courtyard. We were taken across the courtyard and confined in King's Bench Court No. 2. In the course of a few hours more prisoners were brought in, viz., a young officer and an army chaplain in uniform, a three Metropolitan police constables, a soldier and two civilians. As I could see, five officers, were given the judge's room with access to the court. We dined on something called "tea" and bread and glad to get it. Next day (Tuesday) another officer was added to our number. He, with Lord Dunsany, also in uniform, motored along the quays, and no one giving any warning, had come to the barricade. Several shots were fired.

Lord Dunsany was wounded in the chest, his chauffeur in the hand. The officer jumped out and went behind a car for cover; he then came out holding up his hands. The two wounded men were allowed to walk with assistance to the Richmond hospital, then in the hands of the Sinn Feiners. The officer was incarcerated with us. We remained in the same room and room until Friday; our captors were increasingly kind and civil. As the days went on I could see that they were getting more and more strained from want of rest and sleep. Day and night there was rifle fire and bombing all round us. We could hear the bullets from the troops at the south side of the river flattening on the building at right angles from our wing. We lived most of the time by electric light, keeping the shutters closed as a guard against strokes of lightning. Our window was not under direct fire.

On Friday we were removed to a passage with solid walls adjoining the Nisi Prius court, this to save us from shell fire which was expected. Before nightfall that day we were given a large room (I think the bench's court or oil chamber) looking out across a courtyard to the Metropolitan police court and Bridewell, both buildings being fortified and held by the insurgents. About 6 p.m. on Saturday things were so quiet in this court yard that we opened a window and got some air. Later on I heard an order given: "Cease firing, but stand to your posts." Desultory firing went on, but soon I heard the word passed: "Cease firing; peace is declared." About 6 p.m. we were released and went to the court yard in rear of main building where we found the insurgents under the orders and superintendence of their own officers and a friar, who was very active, bringing their rifles, ammunition and belts to the railings through which they passed them to the soldiers outside, who piled them in the street ready for removal. When each man had delivered up his arms he fell in, forming a line in double rank. When all were formed up an escort of the Dublin Fusiliers was distributed front and rear. I heard the insurgents' number before moving off and concluded there were at least 150 of them. So things took a considerable time, so it was about 8 p.m. when we proceeded with a military escort to the royal barracks where I was hospitably entertained by the officers, Lt. Col. E. J. Fox and Capt. J. J. O'Sullivan until Monday. On Monday I managed to recover my motor car which had been standing at the barricade for nearly a week. It was struck by seven bullets, all, I think, from military rifles, but was also well looted, but the car was not the Sinn Feiners. There are the heads of my experiences. Of course there were many conversations with Sinn Fein officers and various incidents, which, if rendered into journalism, would be highly interesting though perhaps not quite accurate in the relating.

Fought Like Gentlemen
What impressed me most through the whole affair was the international military tone adopted by the Sinn Fein officers. They were not out for massacre, for burning or for loot. They were out for war, observing all the rules of civilized warfare and fighting clean. So far as I saw they fought like gentlemen. At first they were elated and evidently full of hope. As they were pressed by the troops and no doubt receiving bad news from outside, they looked anxious and tired, but still bore themselves well and maintained discipline amongst their men.

No Drinking
They had possession of the restaurant in the courts stocked with spirits and champagne and other wines, but there was no sign of drinking. I was informed that they were all total abstemious. They treated their prisoners with the utmost courtesy and consideration in fact they proved by their conduct what they are—men of education, incapable of acts of brutality, though, alas, misguided and fed up with lies and false expectations!

Gratitude to Officers
The officers with whom I came in contact were Captain Daly, Captain Fahy, Lieut. McWilliams, Lieut. Duggan, and their sergeant major. To all of them I owe a debt of gratitude for their generous treatment of me and my fellow-prisoners.

Corsets

Correctly Fitted

The average woman will spend several days thinking about her new gown, and that some woman will often times buy her corset without even having it fitted. How can your gown be distinctive if your figure is not correctly corseted? Pay attention to the selection of your corset. This is of prime importance.

Frolaset Front Laced Corsets

Are designed and fitted by the makers for and on living models. Every detail is given the closest attention. There isn't a thing that isn't just so. Each model is intended for a certain figure and most admirably do they fit the figure for which they are intended.

Miss Watt will be with us for four days this week to demonstrate and fit Front Laced Corsets. Let her fit you.

IN PROTESTANT CHURCHES

Rev. Mr. Ferrin Preached Baccalaureate Sermon for Rogers Hall—Confirmation at St. Anne's

"Human Dynamics" was the subject of the baccalaureate sermon preached by Rev. A. C. Ferrin to the young women of Rogers Hall school at the High Street Congregational church, Sunday morning. He found his text in Luke, 24:49, "But tarry ye here in the city, until ye be clothed by power from on high." In the course of his sermon he referred to the influence of books on human life and in a personal message to the young women he said: "Get close in the coming months to the books that suggest higher ideals of living, and first of all to the Book of Books; get closer to the works of art that purify and lift, get closer to the men and women whose friendship enables and inspires; get closer to the spirit and personality of Jesus Christ; get closer to God himself through faith and prayer. In this way, and in this way only, will you justify the labors and sacrifices of your parents and teachers, and fulfill their hopes and expectations."

The preacher said there are four channels through which personality moves—literature, art, men and God. He said that the influence of a book on human life needs no argument; it only needs fresh statement.

"It is too evident," he said, "from the experience of the boy who under the influence of the yellow novel commits his first crime to the hardened criminal who is reclaimed from a life of sin by a Book of Books. Books are one of the few staple articles of diet for the mind, and the intellectual diet is as important in the problem of a strong, healthy personality as is the physiological diet in the problem of a strong, healthy body. A book is to be judged not less, I think more, by the personality of the author which permeates it and touches the personality of the reader, than by the ideas it expresses. A book in which one does not feel the personality of the author is not worth reading. It is either a shallow commonplace or a mere commercial product. A book in which one feels the personality of the author, but feels it to be tainted with wrong motives and low ideals, by a sordid ambition, a perverted conscience or a godless consciousness, or even if it be but a personality that is weaker than one's own—such a book should be flung from his hand.

But a book in which the author's personality is felt as a suggestion and inspiration to purer thoughts, higher ideals and nobler and deeper living, which makes one desire to be a better, to do greater and better things, which is a book to make one's friend and companion. Such books are the jewels of noble manhood and womanhood. They make moral fibre and spiritual power by broadening one's range of thinking, by deepening the foundations of one's convictions, and by raising the level of one's ambition. This is why we may hope that the revival of interest in Shakespeare in this tercentenary year will help redeem a generation overfed with a diet of yellow journalism and ephemeral literature.

There have been those who have thought intellectual culture detrimental to our spiritual life. I recall a conversation some years ago with a good woman who deprecated feelingly the decision of a young man—a mutual friend to take a theological course as a preparation for the ministry. She was afraid it would temper his religious zeal. She cared more for zeal than for effective power.

I suppose that one who lets his mental garden grow up to weeds, or who falls to enrich the soil, may find some place in God's great laboratory where he is working out his idea of a perfect world, but it must needs be a small place; such an one has so little in him for God to work with.

Good books are one source of that dynamic of human personality which is helping to build the kingdom of God on the earth. Here is one secret of the value of the Bible. To come in contact with the personalities of its writers and heroes, of such men as Abraham with his sublime faith, of Moses with his breadth of mind and sagacious foresight, of Joshua with his simple faith and stalwart integrity, of the Psalmists with their rare and spiritual nature, or to come into sympathetic contact with the personalities of the old prophets—Amos with his passion for righteousness, Hosea with his passion of love, Jeremiah with his experience of sorrow, Isaiah with his passion of hope and his spiritual insight, or to feel the influence of the personality of Paul with his strenuous and consecrated zeal—this is to find oneself imbued with greater power. But above all, to get close to the personality of Jesus—this is to have one's own personality furnished with an equipment of power to speak and work for God and humanity that is found in no other book.

Confirmation at St. Anne's

The new suffragan bishop, Rev. Samuel G. Babcock, conducted the confirmation service at St. Anne's church last night. Sixty-five young people were confirmed. The confirmation at St. John's church was postponed until Sunday, June 18.

Bishop Lawrence is ill and Bishop Babcock, at the Sunday evening service in St. Anne's conveyed to the rector and congregation the regret of Bishop Lawrence at his inability to attend. He said that only illness would have prevented the bishop from coming. In his address to the confirmation class, Bishop Babcock said:

"The spirit of God will make you loyal to your church, to your minister as a leader, and to your Christian duties; loyal to Christ in your home, in your business. In all your human relations you can be made loyal to the end only through the power of God's spirit in your lives. And your characters will be built up. You will increase in his holy spirit more and more. That means the building up of character.

"The holy spirit protects us, the holy spirit makes us loyal Christians, enables us to build up the fabric of a Christian character. The holy spirit strengthens us in the presence of the duties of life. If this world is ever to be saved, if peace is ever to come to this warring world, we must have the strength and the power of the holy ghost to bring it all to pass. We are living in times such as men and women have not seen for centuries. But it is not the Christian civilization which is tottering; it is that civilization which lacks the Christian spirit. Through the power of the holy ghost in men's lives and in the lives of the nations only will civilization stand.

"In a very real sense this service of consecration is your ordination to Christian service. The one thing which we must all have if we are to live Christ's life in the world, if we are to serve the world as Christ served it, is the presence and the power of the holy ghost. It is simply a matter of opening the door and welcoming him."

HELP IS SCARCE

Farmers Can't Get Men to Do Their Planting and Care for Crops

"How's the crops?"
"Nothing growing but hay."
"What's the matter?"
"Ground is wet and cold."
"The spring, I know, has been backward."
"But the crops are not our greatest bother. In fact I am almost afraid to see mine come up."
"I don't get you. Is there an army of worms waiting for them?"
"No, I haven't seen any worms. There are only four letters in our trouble."
"What are the letters?"
"Can't you get all the help you want?"
"No, nor half of the help we want. I want four men. I have been here all day and I can't get a farmhand or anybody who is willing to tackle farm work."

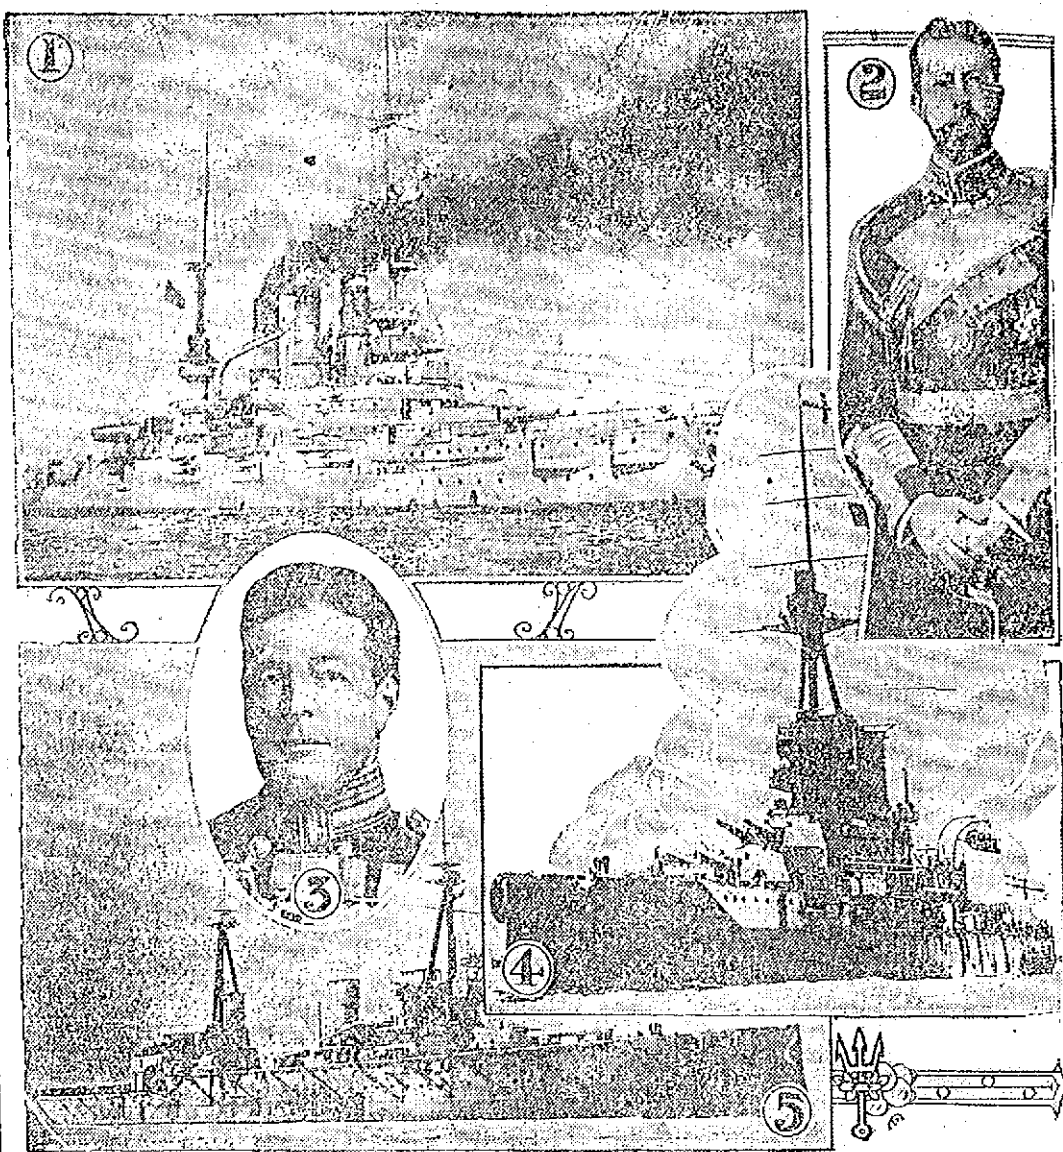

This dialogue, between a Tewksbury man, a farmer, and a Lowell man, was overheard in the street Saturday. The farmer allowed that the neighbors were taking most of the help, but he knew that a number of hard-working men, who could be counted on to do rough work, have gone back to their home countries to serve in the armies and that few farmhands are coming here to take their place.

The farmer, however, is not the only one who is experiencing the "help difficulty." Many a man is cutting his own grass and doing his own gardening this spring, and many a housekeeper is doing her own spring cleaning, because there never was a time when it was so hard to find people to work as it is these days.

GREATEST NAVAL BATTLE EVER FOUGHT

ENGAGED SOME OF WORLD'S BIGGEST SHIPS

The battle cruiser Invincible, which the British admit losing in the great North sea battle, was a vessel of 17,250 tons. She took part in the naval engagement off the Falkland islands in December of 1914, in which the German Pacific squadron, which had made its way into the Atlantic after defeating a British squadron off the Chilean coast, was destroyed. The British dreadnaught Marlborough, said by the Germans to have been struck by a torpedo, was of the Iron Duke class. She was built at Devonport in 1914 and displaced 23,000 tons. The Marlborough was 620 feet long, 89½ feet beam and 27 feet deep. The German battleship Pommern, lost in the fight, was a second line vessel, with a displacement of 12,597 tons. Her full complement of men and officers was 229. She was 38 feet long, with a depth of twenty-one feet. The ship was built in 1907 at a cost of $4,000,000. The British battle cruiser is commanded by Vice Admiral Sir David Beatty, in whom Americans may be said to be specially interested, because he is married to an American, the daughter of the late Marshall Field of Chicago. Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of Emperor William, is commander in chief of the German fleet, but was not in command at sea in the battle, that honor falling to Vice Admiral Scherer, commander of the high sea fleet. Stories of the battle say that the activity of the German fleet was due to the energetic demands of Emperor William to his brother and Admiral von Capelle, minister of the navy, on the emperor's recent visit to Wilhelmshaven. No. 1, the Pommern; No. 2, Prince Henry; No. 3, Admiral Beatty; No. 4, the Invincible; No. 5, the Marlborough. The British deny the loss of the Marlborough.

AUGUST BELMONT SAYS HORSE RACING

IN THE EAST IS ON THE UP GRADE

NEW YORK, June 5.—August Belmont is highly pleased over the success of the race meeting at Belmont park and also the victory of his horse, Friar Rock, in the Suburban recently. Mr. Belmont said recently: "The splendid daily attendance is evidence of the popularity of racing. I do not think there ever was a gathering that equaled the one on the day the Suburban was run in quality on a race course in this country. Although it may have been exceeded in numbers. When the Westchester racing association took over the Suburban handicap the future of the sport was shaded in more or less doubt, but the enthusiasm exhibited today has given renewed confidence, and the Suburban of 1917 will have $5,000 added with an increased starting and declaration fee. This will bring it back to the position it formerly occupied in the esteem of the public." When it was then that Mr. Belmont that his famous mare, Fairy Gold, played a prominent part in giving the first two such sterling performances as Friar Rock and Stromboli, this mare being the dam of Fair Play, the champion of the Jockey club said: "She is indeed a fine mare, and being by Ben D'Or, out of a Hermit dam, she was well worth the $15,000 I paid for her at the Belmont sale. She has been mated this year with Friar Rock, brother to Tricory, in the Nursery stud in Kentucky. Photo shows, left to right, Sam Hildreth, trainer; Jockey Shuttinger, who piloted Friar Rock, winner of the Suburban handicap; and August Belmont.

LOWELL BOY GRADUATES WAITE IN SING SING

NELSON B. RUSSELL TO GET RANK OF LIEUTENANT AT WEST POINT THIS MONTH

Nelson Bateman Russell, son of H. H. Russell of 152 Branch street, will be graduated from West Point on June 12 with the rank of lieutenant. Russell is a graduate of the primary, Highland grammar and Lowell high schools. He entered West Point June 14, 1912, and represents the fifth congressional district at the academy.

Cadet Russell is 24 years old. He is going to get his lieutenantancy with the rest of his mates and has plucked along indifferently to the end. He is a marksman, too. Russell stood No. 121 on the last published standing. He was No. 122 in engineering; No. 125 in law; No. 123 in Spanish and No. 129 in ordnance and gunnery. He will graduate in the infantry branch of the service and may be a first lieutenant before some of his classmates are off, for it is said that nearly all the infantry men in this year's class will get rapid promotion under the new army bill, because of the increased number of officers required.

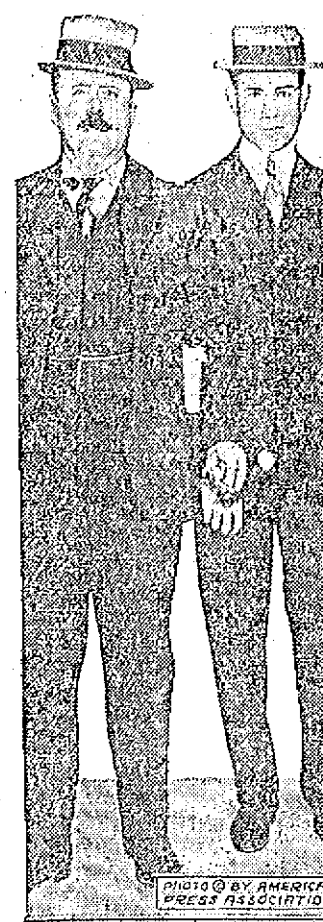

Coming: Willie Blackburn.

MURDERER OF PECK RETAINS HIS MARVELOUS COMPOSURE—WILL DIE WEEK OF JULY 10

Retaining his marvelous composure, Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, murderer, was taken from the Tombs prison, New York City to Sing Sing for electrocution in the week of July 10. In the picture Dr. Waite is seen on the right, handcuffed to a deputy sheriff. Like an after-dinner speaker rising to a toast, he responded to a sentence of death in the criminal branch of the supreme court with a brief address, in which he expressed his gratitude for the penalty which the state intended to inflict upon him.

LOWELL MAN MURDERED

Jesse Milliken Murdered on His Way From Lumber Camp to Lowell—Body in River

Jesse Milliken, who left a lumber camp in Penobscot, Me., last April to visit his mother in this city, was killed and robbed according to the police officials who have been working on the case. His body was found in the river between Gorham and Berlin, Coos county, New Hampshire, and at first it was thought the man had committed suicide. Later, however, an autopsy was held and revealed that Milliken had died of a broken neck and it was also discovered that his right ear had been torn off before the body had been thrown into the river.

As the body was clothed only in an undershirt and stockings, the identification of the man was not made until it was learned that a boy had found some discarded garments from 35 to 40 rods from the place at which the body was found. A search of the pockets brought to light several articles, including keys and a metallic tag with "J. V. L. Co. 1908" upon the latter. At the Connecticut Valley Lumber Co. it was learned that a man registering under this number was Jesse Milliken, whose former home was in St. George, N. B. He worked in the Penobscot camp in 1915 and this year left the camp in April, apparently intending to visit his mother in Lowell.

BOOM FOR HUGHES

Justice will continue to preserve his silence while he occupies a place on the supreme court bench, but that if nominated he will immediately make a satisfactory statement of his position on national questions which will be an issue in the campaign.

In discussing proposals of a pre-nomination statement from Justice Hughes his supporters point out that so far as his position on national issues is concerned, addresses made by him went on the bench show him to be far preparedness and sound from a party point of view, on all of the more important issues.

It is being argued that lack of information regarding Mr. Hughes' declaration is wholly responsible for the charge that he is a "mystery candidate."

Gov. Whitman Talks

Word has gone out from Gov. Whitman's quarters that it is futile to look forward to any spectacular 11th hour move on the part of those who are demanding the jurist's nomination. Gov. Whitman also made it clear that no one of the men fighting for the nomination of Justice Hughes have had direct word from him that their efforts have his approval.

In discussing the Hughes movement today, Gov. Whitman said he believed it had attained proportions of a boom and cannot be headed off.

On every hand there seems to be sentiment to avoid making the nomination the campaign issue and to select someone on whom republicans and progressives can agree so the word will go out to the country and that the party has been rehabilitated by the untiring factions which split it four years ago. It is realized that of all possibilities, Col. Roosevelt has the greatest personal following, but at the same time he has the most enemies. The conviction that Col. Roosevelt would not be able to unite the party has led to general declarations in favor of the nomination of some strong man who may not have the popularity of Col. Roosevelt, but whose nomination would be a signal to the country that the factional strife has been ended.

All forces are careful not to express hostility to Col. Roosevelt or to say anything which would make it impossible for progressives to come back into the party. It is recognized that Roosevelt can prevent the nomination of any one or two men who may be urged by republican leaders, but that should be attempted to go farther than this, and as some say "scratch the whole ticket," the convention would be very likely to proceed without giving further consideration to his views.

The attitude of men taking this position is summed by their statements that they "want Col. Roosevelt's help, but not his domination." They are determined not to permit Roosevelt to name the ticket by a process of elimination.

One of the outstanding features of this convention is the absence of commanding leadership by the men who compose the "Old Guard." They are not and on the ground but they seem to have no definite control of affairs. There is a conspicuous lack of what every convention has known as "fixers" who came with plans for the platform all prepared and assurances that they were going in, little groups of leaders who got together in conferences and arranged things and then practically brought them before the convention for ratification.

Favorite Son Candidates

Of all the favorite sons who will be presented to the convention, none is estimated to have the strength to command a stampede. The weeks supporters are continuing their claims of 200 or more votes on the first ballot. Senator Cummings' managers claim more than 100 votes on the first ballot, and in addition, say that Col. Roosevelt would support their man, but it is not generally believed that any of the favorite sons votes can be held all the way through.

Fred W. Estabrook, national committee man from New Hampshire, said today he believed all but four votes would be practically eliminated after the first ballot. He thinks Col. Roosevelt out of the race. The eight votes of his state, he thinks, will be scattered on the first ballot, two of them going to Weeks. Mr. Estabrook predicted that Hughes would continue to receive votes until a nomination was made.

Regardless of what action the republican and progressive conventions finally take, Victor Murdock of Kansas, chairman of the progressive national committee who arrived here today declared that the progressive party "must not and will not pass out of existence."

Mr. Murdock declined to predict the probable action of the progressives. James R. Garfield of Ohio, Roosevelt leader, said political expediency was largely the cause of the progressives' failure to disclose any definite program regarding their support of Col. Roosevelt.

George W. Perkins of New York, recognized spokesman for the progressive party, issued a statement today reiterating that he was for harmony with the older party, but not for harmony at any price. He did not amplify this statement beyond saying he will not lose sight of the fact that too high a price can be paid for anything and that harmony was no exception to the rule.

organization pledged to the support of the Susan B. Anthony suffrage amendment to the federal constitution opened its convention at the Blackstone theatre today for a three days session during which time it is planned to form a body to be known as the women's party.

Tomorrow the National American Woman Suffrage association, a federation of state suffrage associations, which favors a campaign for the adoption of suffrage by states will begin a two days session at the Princess theatre.

The National association has prepared a plank calling for equal suffrage which will be presented to the republican convention Wednesday at the close of the suffrage parade, with the request that it be placed in the party's platform.

According to suffrage leaders, the women hold the balance of power, for the states in which they are allowed to vote cast one-fifth of the electoral vote and one-third of the votes necessary to elect a president. Their strength, they declare, will be enough to the party favoring suffrage and declaring for it.

LEGISLATIVE LULL

House Begins Consideration of Miscellaneous Bills—Members Go to Chicago

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Marking the first week of the legislative lull during the national political conventions period, the house today began consideration of miscellaneous bills. Party leaders on both sides of the capitol had reached an agreement whereby only business of a routine nature should be taken up for the next two weeks to permit members of congress to attend the conventions. There will be no session of the senate until Thursday.

Most republican senators and representatives had departed today for Chicago. Democratic members will leave for St. Louis the latter part of the week.

The colonel said that he had picked one gold bilek, meaning Taft, and he did not propose to pick another.

MAY TIE UP NEWS

Nation-Wide Strike of Telegraphers May Be Called Tomorrow as Conventions Begin Sessions

NEW YORK, June 5.—The threatened nation-wide strike of telegraph operators may be called tomorrow just as the republican and progressive national conventions are about to open their first sessions in Chicago.

Officials of the Commercial Telegraphers Union of America, who have been empowered to take action against the Western Union Telegraph company, are now awaiting the report of the Massachusetts legislative investigation into the discharge of 11 men in the Western Union office in Boston. Should the investigation be without result, it is fully expected that the officials of the telegraphers will take the drastic action they contemplate and call out all their men.

According to a statement of S. J. Konenkamp, president of the Commercial telegraphers union, the 20,000 Union officers are anxious that a strike be called just when the wires will be necessary to carry the news of the political conventions in Chicago. Mr. Konenkamp is doubtful if the Western Union company will accept the offers of Roland P. May, federal mediator, and he asserts that the telegraphers are a unit for a nation-wide strike.

LOWELL BOY WINS 20-MILE EVENT WITH 65 ENTRIES—HAD START OF 10 MINUTES

NEW YORK, June 5.—A new American record for the 20 yards long hurdles, 13 3/4 seconds—was made yesterday by J. J. Eller of the Irish American Athletic club at a meet held in connection with the American Athletic day celebration in the new Sheepshead Bay stadium. The time was three-fifths of a second faster than Eller's record made in 1902. J. K. Norton, of Leland Stanford, Jr. university was second, his time being 14 seconds.

Leroy A. Davis, of the Burlington club of Lowell, Mass., won a 20-mile modified marathon handicap run in 2 hours, 3 minutes and 35 seconds. He had an allowance of 10 minutes. Thirty-five of the 65 starters finished.

FOR IRISH TAG DAY

MEETING OF FRIENDS OF IRISH FREEDOM PREPARATIONS FOR TAG DAY

A most enthusiastic public meeting was held last evening in the Hibernian hall under the auspices of the Padraic H. Pearse branch Friends of Irish Freedom to make arrangements for the Irish Tag day that will be held in Lowell next Saturday, June 10. About 100 were in attendance, every seat being taken, with many standing at the back of the hall and before the close of the meeting all volunteered to aid in the work of Tag day.

Young ladies especially had been invited in order that a body of volunteer tag sellers might be organized and the names of over 100 were enrolled in the volunteer list. In the course of the meeting Miss Katherine A. Gaffney, president of the Ladies Auxiliary, A.O.U., announced that her organization would do everything possible to aid in the work of Tag day, and she declared that she would call the matter to the attention of the regular meeting on Tuesday.

James F. Miskella, president at the meeting last evening and made the introductory speech. The rebellion, he said, was Ireland's declaration that the light of centuries is still on stronger than ever. The work of the martyrs is done. They have given their all. They are no more on earth but they will live for ever and their spirit will go marching on to aid the cause of Irish nationality and the light of the sad conditions in Ireland where so many families have been made desolate by the executions and imprisonments, where all industry is paralyzed by martial law and where people are haunted by the spectre of untold Irish taxation. He also touched on the work of Tag day, declaring that it has the hearty and active support of Cardinals Gibbons, Farley and O'Connell.

Joseph Smith said, in part: To collect funds for the families of those dead or imprisoned is a Christian work. No people have been more generous than the Irish people to every call for aid and today it is Ireland that calls. We must work hard and make a greater effort than any people because there is an artificially created sentiment against us. We must meet this sentiment with the open, and one of the ways to meet it is to be true to the race and to the land next Saturday and always.

Remember that the names of the great ones that have come to us are dead but the names of all who died in the rebellion are still living and are on the streets and many were murdered by the soldiery as brutally as in '98. These and the men in prison have left their loved ones in want, and they will look in vain for charity if we do not aid them. English charity is Ireland's symbol of every highway and byway of the stricken land. Remember your dead, the dead of Dublin who will live for ever.

If we must give money to charity, let us feed the mouths of the hungry. The treasurer of the Friends of Irish Freedom in New York with a resolution of the most prominent bankers of that city and every dollar collected will be accounted for. The fund will be taken to Ireland by personal representatives and distributed under the supervision of Archbishop Walsh of Dublin and prominent public men and clergymen.

Joseph P. Quinn, secretary of the branch, read the records of the last meeting and spoke briefly on organization of the local body. He reported for the executive committee and told of the negotiations that have already been made. He also read the last letter which Padraic H. Pearse wrote to his mother on the eve of his execution and in conclusion sketched the outline of plans for Tag day.

James O'Sullivan asked aid to remember that the Irish republic is not dead and that there is living today an Irish president named before the execution of Pearse. England thought it put down a rebellion, he said, but it has only started one and nothing has ever been such a powerful force to weld the Irish race everywhere into a mass demanding justice for every land, country, or the country of their fathers. He also spoke of Tag day in detail and urged all to work faithfully and unflinchingly until it is made a tremendous success.

Miss Gaffney, president of the Ladies Auxiliary, A.O.U., was the last speaker of the evening. She expressed her personal interest in the work and declared that she would make plans with her organization for the furtherance of Tag day plans on Tuesday evening. It was announced that a meeting of the lady volunteers would be held in Hibernian hall Tuesday evening and the final meeting of the committee Friday evening in reception room, Associate hall.

FOUR ACT DRAMA
Fine Entertainment for Benefit of St. Jean Baptiste's Church

Standing room was at a premium at the Playhouse in Shattuck street last evening, and this speaks well for the group of women of St. Joseph's parish, who had prepared a first class entertainment for the benefit of St. Jean Baptiste's church. The occasion was the presentation of a four-act drama entitled "Dolor a D'Albe," and written by G. de Wailly, and the organizers were well repaid for their efforts for the evening's success was the best obtained in this particular line for a long time. Long before the first act set for the opening of the entertainment, a dry snail in the house had been taken, and suffice it to say that the financial success of the evening was far better than anticipated.

The cast was composed of female performers and the pretty costumes of the young women added greatly to the stage effect. The staging was perfect in every way, while each part was well rendered. One of the features of the evening's program was the first appearance in public of Miss Anna Martel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Martel of 739 Moody street, who has an exceptionally pleasing stage presence and the magnetism that gains the immediate attention of the audience. Her voice is soprano of a rich full quality and she has her tones in perfect control. Her first number, was the "Nymphs of Salinas," by Benbern and her second selection was the "Joy of Spring," by Hawley. Rarely

RESCUED FROM DROWNING

TWO YOUNG MEN HAD NARROW ESCAPE WHEN DUMPED FROM A CANOE

Two young men whose names could not be learned, but who are believed to be members of the Olympic club had a narrow escape from drowning in Lake Massapequa yesterday afternoon, when their canoe was upset. The young men were rescued by two other men, who rushed to their assistance in row boats.

According to the story, the two young men were paddling along in a canoe, when not very far from the shore, at Lakeview, their frail craft turned over, precipitating them into the deep water. Two men, who were walking along the shore at the time of the accident, saw the two young men struggling in the water and jumping into a rowboat, hurried to their aid. After considerable trouble they succeeded in bringing the two half-drowned men to the shore, the rescue being witnessed by several persons.

A PEOPLE'S COLLEGE

The outline of university extension education under state auspices, as given by Mr. Spahr of the state board Friday afternoon, reveals to Lowell an opportunity that should be embraced without delay. The new work is designed to meet a real need and it is being applied in a practical manner that appeals to the ordinary ambitious individual who heretofore has had more ambition than educational advantages.

University extension has been practiced for years by the leading colleges and universities of this country and every winter classes from Lowell have attended some of the private sessions in Boston. This necessitated frequent evening trips to Boston, with poor railroad accommodation and considerable expense, and those who persevered to the end deserve great credit. It will now be possible for men and women of this city to take superior courses in Lowell, practically free of charge and under the best educators in New England.

Three methods were mentioned by Mr. Spahr as receiving the sanction of the state board. The first is a correspondence system, given in 70 subjects, many of which will fill a public need and all of which are under the direction of experts. It will no longer be necessary for those who know of state generosity to enroll in distant schools which conduct correspondence on a purely commercial basis. Another is the "group" system which is an amplification of the correspondence course. At least ten students may get together for instruction in any subject and if they study in class the state will provide an instructor for every fourth meeting. This should be acted on by groups of men and women who may like to take up some academic or technical subject.

For those who desire to form classes, no time should be lost. It is necessary that 20 enroll in order to secure a professor and the state will agree to classes as often as the students desire them. The teachers organization should lose no time in forming a committee for organization and the board of trade might advantageously co-operate for the good of the public. We have begun to apply an educational system that has worked wonders in the west and in other parts of the country.

GREAT SEA BATTLE

As usual, reports of the great sea engagement between naval contingents of England and Germany off the coast of Denmark are somewhat contradictory, but it was the greatest naval engagement of the war and relatively speaking it appears to have been a victory for Germany. England admits that 14 warships have been sunk, some of them being ships of the first line, and Germany has lost two dreadnoughts and two or three battle cruisers with smaller craft which are not enumerated. Not until the end of the war will all the facts become known. If even then, but the admissions of England show very heavy losses in men and ships.

While the loss of 14 ships will not materially affect the size or strength of the British navy, the moral effect will be far reaching. Germany's navy is only a passive part of the German war program, but the English navy is the greatest single factor in the war plans of the allies. Germany has relied mainly upon her fighting on land as England upon the superiority of her fleet. Hence any crippling of the English navy would be the greatest blow to the cause of the allies. This is what makes the loss of 14 warships so serious for England in spite of the fact that Germany may have lost more ships.

Two points on which the conflicting reports utterly disagree are the number of ships engaged respectively and the immediate outcome of the fight. England says that a small section of her fleet met practically the entire German navy, while Germany says that the English outnumbered them in ships. The fact seems to be that the British cruiser fleet got too far away from the defending battlefleets and suffered severely before the latter got to their assistance. The battle was doubtless the greatest naval engagement in history, considering the aggregate loss of ships and men. This loss would be proportionately greater for Germany whose navy is but half the size of England's, but nothing can make up to England for the blow to her prestige until she wins a great victory on land or sea. Perhaps her statesmen will now stop wrangling and perhaps the masses of the people will wake up to the actual danger to the empire.

LEGISLATURE OF 1916

After a comparatively smooth and uneventful session the Massachusetts legislature of 1916 has been brought to a close and its doings have passed into history which shall not write many of its decisions in letters of gold. All in all, it was the same old grist of hardy annuals, the same committee reports, the same bickering and party maneuvers and the same noisy drive for the public welfare until it was time to vote. Yet it did not pass epoch-making laws, it did not run mad along radical lines and the public may look back with kindly feelings and commend those who took part. One fact above all others calls for congratulation; it was the shortest session since 1889, and it avoided the boring dragging at the end which has tried the popular patience for many years.

While fewer acts were passed than for several years an idea of the business transacted may be gained from the fact that 368 general acts and 374 special acts were passed. Sixteen bills were vetoed by the governor, the latest being the trading stamps bill, and 13 bills were allowed to become law without his signature. On most of the measures throughout the session both the executive and legislative branches were in harmony and party divisions did not crop out conspicuously in the voting.

A gratifying feature of the session was the fewness of freak bills, showing that public opinion is becoming effective. The income tax law was probably the most important bill passed though time will determine whether it will come up to the high predictions made by its supporters. Other bills passed were the act calling for a constitutional convention, the amendment of the workmen's compensation law, the act allowing daily payment to prisoners and acts in the interests of "preparedness." The lowering of the state tax is one of the much heralded achievements, though this was partly due to an increase in revenue from outside causes. If future sessions do as much good and as little harm, there will be little cause for complaint.

FLAG DESECRATION

Bouck White of the church of the social revolution, New York, has once again been sentenced to the penitentiary—this time for a desecration of the American flag. His specific offense was the burning of the Stars and Stripes with a number of other flags and the circulation of a cartoon representing his new flag floating above the flags of all nations. In the burning service the various flags were burned by men and women who had been born under them, respectively. For this type of madness the penitentiary is a poor cure as it helps to make a martyr out of White and his kind in the eyes of his followers, but the law does not countenance such acts. Sufficient renunciation of other flags is made by the good immigrants to this country who put aside all other flags when they swear allegiance to the flag of Uncle Sam. If America is not perfect Mr. White and other radicals can find work to do in getting the country back to the policies of Washington and Jefferson without starting any crazy scheme of socialistic origin. It is work such as this that operates on little groups in all cities and supplies the men who throw knives at ex-presidents and hurl stones through the windows of Fifth avenue mansions. The pity of it is that anything so illegal and criminal should be done in the name of religion. The men who come to this country to spurn the flag should be deported and the men who having become citizens show a disrespect of the privileges thus conferred should be disfranchised.

SEEN AND HEARD

There are a lot of things that will rub out the poetical mood in time.

A Burden Bearer
"Where have you been, Mary Ann?"
"I've been to the girls' improvement class, ma'am," was the maiden's reply.
"Well, what did the minister say to you?" Did you tell him who your mistress was?
"Please, ma'am, he said I wasn't to give notice, as I intended, but that I was to consider you as my burden—and bear it!"—Baltimore Star.

A Slight Exception
The lady who sat in the physician's consulting room was certainly stout. Her reason for seeing him was that he might prescribe some course of treatment which would reduce her too solid flesh, and after some consideration the doctor drew up a dietary for her, ordering her strictly to follow it, and return to him in a month. At the end of that time she came back, looking stouter than ever. The physician was amazed.
"Are you quite sure you ate what I ordered?" he asked.
"Everything," answered the patient. "This same I've wrangled in perplexity. And nothing else."
"Nothing whatever, doctor, except of course, my regular meals."—Exchange.

And 'Twas All True
The Rev. George R. Linn, the socialist mayor of Schenectady, was congratulated on his election.
"The people have confidence in the honesty of my party's policy," he said.

said, "Our opponents tried to put our principles in a false light, but the people couldn't be fooled. They knew that the opposition's animadversions on our principles were as misleading as the bachelor's description of his sister's new baby."

"Asked to describe this new arrival, the bachelor replied:
"Um! Very small features, clean shaven, red-faced and a very hard drinker!"

Humility's Power

A woman once came to the cave of a sage who was renowned for his profound analysis of her sex.
"Father," said she, "let me sit at your feet awhile. I am but a woman, faulty and foolish and weak—but I would fain be the pupil of your learning and the disciple of your virtues."
And the sage, secure in his wisdom, consented.
Then he laid himself down to sleep in the shade of a rock, out of the glare of the sun. When he awakened he was humiliated and bound hand and foot—a prisoner to love.
He had protected himself against every feminine weapon except the most dangerous one—humility.—New York Evening Sun.

Highly Dramatic

Backward and forward he paced, his eyes wild and rolling, his face haggard. As the minutes passed his agitation increased.
"Will she never come? Will she never come?" he wailed wildly. "Already it is 15 minutes past the appointed time, and yet she is not here."
He pressed his hands to his fevered brow and waited. He gazed sadly through the window and went on waiting.
At last! Ah! The sound of little footsteps on the stairs. He turned to the door, eager, excited.
Yes, it was she.
"You have come, then?" he gasped, dizzy with delight, as he grabbed his hat.
Yes, the stenographer had come back and it was now his turn to go out to luncheon.—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

Father's Trouble

The other day when Pa came home his face was long and sad.
He looked as though his dearest hopes had all deserted him.
He didn't have a word to say, he never smiled, but he tried to sit at the table.
An' he left his dinner on his plate, 'thout ever touching it.
We looked at Ma an' wondered what it was that made him sad.
She nodded not to speak to him, for he was feeling blue.
An' so we just sat there an' ate as solemn-like an' still.
As people are when one's dead or dangerously ill.
"What is it, Pa?" asked Ma at last, "is all your money gone?"
Whatever he answered today to bring this sorrow on.
You went away this morning bright and cheerful. What has come so sudden on you?
So sudden that you tell that you should be so glum?
Pa sat an' stared at vacant space, an' didn't make a reply.
He looked like somebody, Ma said, who had been doomed to die.
At last he pushed his plate away, an' then got up to go.
An' Ma said: "Tell me what is wrong!"
I've simply got to know."

EXCESSIVE MEAT EATING

"Most people who are troubled with flatulency eat more meat than is good for them. Flatulency is wind on the stomach. Excessive meat eating or defective nerve force is responsible in most cases.

Cutting down the amount of meat in your diet and taking a course of treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to strengthen the weak nerves that control the digestive processes is well worth trying if you have wind on the stomach, sour risings in the throat, a feeling of weakness in the stomach and palpitation of the heart. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are recommended for thin blood and weak nerves, whatever the cause.

Send today to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., for this diet book "What to Eat and How to Eat." It gives information regarding the tonic treatment for many forms of stomach trouble. There cannot be perfect digestion without a sufficient supply of red blood and there is nothing better than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to enrich the blood and tone up the stomach.

Your own druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they will be mailed, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Proposals For Coal

Sealed proposals, addressed to the Middlesex County Commissioners and endorsed "Proposals for Coal" will be received by said Commissioners at the Court House, Lowell, until Monday, the nineteenth day of June, 1916, at 10 o'clock A. M. for a supply of coal to be delivered as described below, and at that time will be publicly opened and read.

All bids must be upon blank forms to be obtained at the office of the Commissioners, Court House, Lowell, and must give the prices proposed both in writing and in figures and be signed by the bidder with his address.

Each bid is to be accompanied by a certified check for two hundred dollars ($200.00) payable to the County of Middlesex, said check to be returned to the bidder unless he fails to execute a contract should it be awarded to him.

Each bid will be required for the faithful performance of the contract in such sums as shall be fixed by said Commissioners after the bids are opened. The sum to be not less than one-fourth nor more than one-half of the amount of the contract.

All bids will be compared on the basis of the estimated quantities of coal needed which are as follows:

150 tons more or less, of best New River Coal or its equal, 2240 pounds to the ton.

20 tons more or less, best "Lackawanna Broken" or its equal, 2240 pounds to the ton.

The above to be delivered at the Training School at North Chelmsford, at such time and in such quantities as the Commissioners may order.

The quantities are approximate only and the Commissioners expressly reserve the right of increasing or diminishing the same.

The specifications and forms of proposal and contract may be obtained at the office of the Commissioners, Court House, East Cambridge.

The Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids or accept any bid as they may see fit.

LADY LOOKABOUT

It is interesting to note that in the announcement by the civil service authorities in regard to the examination for school physicians soon to be held, that the positions are open to "males" only. The sex restriction introduces a new feature, and cannot but wound the condition in Lowell where already there is one woman school physician prompted by the restriction. There is no question that the position is one which in many respects calls for a woman physician, particularly in the high school, and the Lowell school board, fully realized this demand and acted in accordance. Presumably the current announcement effectively blocks the way to other women physicians who aspire to extend the field of their usefulness in this direction, but like the existence somewhere of a narrow and intolerant spirit which sooner or later must give way to the inevitable advancement of woman.

Poor Spelling

It is with a sort of wicked joy we read the poor spelling at Harvard university. A test of the spelling of the students reveals that two hundred undergraduates are so weak in this branch of English that a course has been introduced for them that they may make up what the authorities are pleased to call the deficiencies of the preparatory schools. "Surely," we argue to ourselves, "if these men cannot spell how can it be expected of me," etc. etc.—you know the line. The preparatory schools in turn place the blame on the high schools, the high schools on the grammar schools, the grammars on the primaries, the primaries on the kindergartens, the kindergartens on the mothers, the mothers on "his" people, and so on indefinitely, until one is reminded of that widely-quoted old rhyme:

"Naturalists observe a flea
Has smaller still on him prey;
And so proceed ad infinitum."

Medicinal Herbs

The full page announcement which recently appeared in the daily newspapers explaining the increase in the prices of drugs, suggests to many a new occupation, namely, drug culture. Many useful medicines are still made from common herbs, and the cutting off of supplies from foreign countries has advanced the price. Formerly, cheapness of labor or special skill enabled the foreigner to beat us on the cultivated things, and wild products are more carefully gathered by peasants than by our own country people. In a recent magazine article the reader was told that there is nothing in our climate to prevent growing many staple drug plants. The Shakers in New York used to raise drugs by the ton, and during our wars when prices were high, we have even grown opium. It has been proved that in this latitude it is possible to grow sage and thyme.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

The General Federation of Women's clubs always is of interest to women in general, and it is with unusual keenness and discernment they read the reports from the convention and from the various committees. Almost invariably these reports are sane, altruistic, and non-partisan, politically and religiously. They represent the ideas of intelligent and progressive women from all over the country, and when they speak, all may listen with profit. Occasionally, however, a visionary slips in among them, and it is to be regretted that the convention must stand sponsor for the utterances of such as these. It must have been some of these visionaries in the conference of the home economics committee who declared that one of the greatest evils of the day was the use of too little well but with distinction at a cost of not less than $3 and not more than $10 per gown. In the eyes of these women, many of their persons governed in 33 dresses, but as the old farmer remarked as he looked upon the giraffe at the circus, "There ain't no such animal." It is also reported from the General Federation that manufacturers admitted that it is possible, if women decree it, to cut dress bills by one-half and even more. How the manufacturers must have laughed in their sleeves as they uttered these sentiments! No doubt many of them immediately returned to their places of business and ordered an extra batch of goods in the styles they produce, or an extra garment on the hats they trim. These speakers place themselves in the same class with those newspaper and magazine letter writers, who cause so much trouble among housewives of limited means who profess to manage a household on a scale of economy, or an order of an absurdly small amount of money. Far better, it would seem, if the home economics would instruct the women of the country to invest their money in dress goods and household furnishings which can stand up under the acid tests of time and wear, instead of telling them they can dress not only well but with distinction at a cost of not less than $3 and not more than $10 per gown.

PRES. WILSON ATTENDS MEMORIAL AT CEMETERY—SEN. VARDAMAN ORATOR

WASHINGTON, June 5.—President Wilson attended memorial exercises held in the Confederate section of Arlington National cemetery here yesterday, but did not speak. His appearance was unexpected, as he previously announced he would be unable to attend. He was enthusiastically received by a large crowd.

Senator Vardaman, the orator of the occasion, defended the right of the Southern States to secede, and declared the answer to the question, "Is it well that the Confederacy failed?" rested with the way the federal government used its power.

Secretary Daniels occupied a seat at the speakers' platform.

GAVE LIFE TO SAVE WOMAN

PASQUALE LOROSSO SHOT TO DEATH BY JEALOUS BOARDER AT WORCESTER

WORCESTER, June 5.—Pasquale Lorosso of 18 Hill street was killed almost instantly early last night when he tried to protect Mrs. Angela Armenta of 275 Shrewsbury street, at whom Giuseppe Corso had aimed an automatic pistol in a fit of jealousy. Corso fired six shots from an 11-shot automatic pistol and fled. Mrs. Armenta kept a lodging house and Corso was a boarder.

Lorosso, who was but 22 years of age, has a family in Italy. He, in company with several companions, had been visiting Mrs. Armenta and was being entertained in the kitchen. Corso returned from work in the New Haven railroad yards and finding the company present upbraided the woman.

After quarreling for a few minutes he went into his room and returned with the pistol. He began firing as soon as he returned to the room. Lorosso sprang to the defense of the woman and received three bullets, one in the leg, another in the body and the third in the head. Three shots went wild, one landing in the floor, another in the wall and the third in the ceiling.

CHIMPANZEE AND DOG

STRANGE BOND OF AFFECTION BETWEEN TWO MASCOTS OF BARNUM & BAILEY MENAGERIE

They're an oddly matched pair, but sweethearts nevertheless.

"Chubb" is the chimpanzee's name and "Pluff" is the name of the little white dog that the monkey holds in his arms. "Chubb" is the clown of the Barnum & Bailey menagerie and his official mission in life is to cut funny capers for the education of the big family of wild animals coming to Lowell, on Friday, June 23, with the "greatest show on earth."

"Pluff" is also a real circus performer, having been a member of a troupe of trained dogs and ponies which for several seasons was featured on the Barnum & Bailey program. Finally the act disbanded and "Pluff" was adopted by the men em-played in the menagerie department. She became a great favorite with the keeper of the chimpanzee cage and she selected his wagon to sleep in at night, because it was always warm, it being necessary to keep the atmosphere at a certain temperature at all times for the chimpanzees.

At first "Chubb," who was boss of the chimpanzees, would have nothing to do with the little dog, but gradually when he began to realize that she meant no harm, he began to play with her whenever she was allowed in the cage. Soon the two became fast friends and "Pluff" would play for hours at a time with the big monkey on the floor of the cage. An affection sprang up between the strange pair and now they are almost inseparable.

When the Barnum & Bailey circus exhibits here this year it will bring the largest and most completely equipped menagerie ever carried by a traveling amusement organization. This department has been greatly enlarged this season, and now contains more than 110 tons of wild animals, in addition to a herd of 11 elephants, 35 camels and a family of giraffes.

A "circus of all nations" is the way the circus program is described this season, and more new and thrilling feature acts are promised than ever before. Approximately 480 artists participate in the performance in the three rings, four stages, and in the maze of aerial rigging, and of this number fully two-thirds are foreigners who are making their first appearance in America this season. Among the wonderful acts are: the celebrated Hanneberg family of bareback riders; Pallenberg's wonderful trained bears; three wonderful troupes of Chinese jugglers and acrobats; a score of new and thrilling acrobatic acts, are but a few of the host of surprises to be offered by the circus this season.

A new and striking novelty of the present season is the stupendous spectacular display, "Feriala, or the Pageants of the Thousand and One Nights," in which 1275 persons and herds of elephants and camels participate. The gorgeous costuming of this wonderful production was the sensation of New York City this spring, when the circus presented it for the first time at Madison Square Garden.

Quality First

I Have a 3400 r. p. m. Ready This Minute For You

This certainly is a great year for selling cars. Most everybody has had success. Some more than others, as is always the case.

Chalmers sales are running 900 per cent ahead of last year all over the United States. Mr. Chalmers' foresight in doubly providing against a shortage of materials has won a great contest.

It has enabled the Chalmers plant to keep on building cars when one or two have shut down or others have had to cut down on allotments to their dealers.

Here it is June and the great Chalmers plant is running day and night, three shifts, turning out more cars than ever before.

How long can Chalmers keep filling the demand?

I don't know. I know only this: the plant is turning out about 125 a day; Chalmers dealers are selling about 425 a day.

The only reason I or any other dealer can supply a car now is because during December, January and February the Chalmers plant worked day and night like Trojans and built about 125 cars a day when the dealers were selling probably only about 80. Soon these 425-a-day sales are going to eat up the surplus made during the Winter months.

I got a letter a few days ago from the Chalmers plant which simply said: "We have on hand orders asking for immediate shipment of cars whose value is in excess of $8,000,000."

I need not narrate the rest of the note which was so obviously subtle that I got the telegraph operators on the job right off.

I'm making my promises on delivery from day to day. I've got cars or can get them now. This may not hold good tomorrow.

Next week I shall cut my promises down still more. Remember, there are only two things that I concern myself with these days. One is to get you to take one ride in a 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers if you have not done so already. That's all I want. The car speaks in a language you'll understand.

The other thing is simply one of mathematics: If the Chalmers factory can turn out 125 cars a day and Chalmers dealers all over the United States are selling 425 a day, how long will the supply last?

Price still unchanged—$1090 Detroit.

333 BRITISH OFFICERS
LOST IN NAVAL BATTLEBritish Survivors Say German
Dreadnought Hindenburg Lost
—Germans Push on at Verdun

A list issued by the British admiralty shows that 333 British officers were lost in the naval battle.

Latest reports received by the British admiralty declare that the German losses in the Jutland naval battle comprised two battle cruisers; one, at least, and probably two battleships; four light cruisers, eight destroyers and a submarine.

British officers identify the two battle cruisers as the Hindenburg and the Lutzow, both of the latest type.

Another British Ship Lost

To the list of British vessels destroyed in the engagement the German admiralty adds the name of the British armored cruiser Euryalus. The British admiralty declares that the Euryalus was not in the Jutland engagement. It also denies the German claim that the British torpedo boat destroyer Tipperary was sunk on May 31 off the Humber.

Russian Success

What apparently is the expected Russian offensive on the eastern front, calculated to relieve the pressure on the Italians facing the Austrian drive in the southern Tyrol, and also that upon the French in Verdun, has been begun along the line from the Pripiet to the Rumanian border.

Russians Capture 13,000

Petrograd officially announces great successes for the Russians along this 250-mile front which comprises fully a third of the eastern battle line. The capture of 13,000 prisoners by the Russian forces is reported.

British Attack Broke Down

Regarding the fighting on the Verdun front Berlin today declares that the French have been making desperate efforts to recapture the ground lost recently to the Germans between Calllette wood and Damloup, northeast of their fortress. Their attempts, however, were without success. Another British attack on the new German position southeast of Ypres, Belgium, is declared to have broken down under the fire of the German guns.

Germans Push On

There is virtually no let-up in the German effort to push back the French lines on the Verdun front northeast of the fortress.

Turkish Successes

The Turkish war office claims further successes against the Russian army operating to the west of Erzurum. The Russians, who recently were compelled to evacuate Mamakhatum, 50 miles west of Erzurum, have

BIG BOOM FOR HUGHES
ROOSEVELT OUT OF RACEMovement for Nomination of Justice
Takes on Aspects of Genuine Boom
at Chicago -- Arriving Delegations
Tell of Sentiment for Jurist--Governor
Whitman's Statement

CHICAGO, June 5.—The movement for the nomination of Justice Hughes today took on the aspect of a genuine boom. Arriving delegations brought evidences of sentiment in favor of the jurist and men who have been identified with the Old Guard of the republican party declared that many delegates instructed for others were ready to turn their votes to him after the first ballot.

The lack of controlling leadership by the men who have composed the Old Guard is emphasized on every hand. They express themselves as not favoring Justice Hughes for any reason of personality but because the delegates bringing first hand reports of sentiment from the states believe he can be the harmonizer who can rehabilitate the party and bring in the progressive strength. On every hand explanations are sought of the failure of expected sentiment for Col. Roosevelt to crystallize. A week ago those who opposed the nomination of Roosevelt were fearful of a stampede to him, but now it is said that is impossible. Many cannot understand what brought this change about. Republican leaders after a canvass today declared that Col. Roosevelt's ultimate strength would not be more than 200 delegates at the outside, and they believe the number would be nearer 150.

It is asserted that the remaining 750 or 800 delegates would not vote for him under any circumstances. It was pointed out that when state delegations were selected it was known that Roosevelt would be a strong factor and probably a candidate. Men were chosen who were believed to be for harmony, which leaders say is not synonymous with Roosevelt and are regarded, therefore, as not of the stampede type. The great mass of the delegates are uninstructed and are counted on to vote for any man who can bring a majority of the progressives back to the republican fold.

All talk of demanding a pre-convention statement from Justice Hughes as a condition of his nomination has practically been abandoned. It was being talked of last night but today it has been eliminated from the discussion. It is generally agreed that the

BUTCHERY AT FORT VAUX
SURPASSES IMAGINATIONScene of Terrible Carnage During Past Few Days—Ground Saturated
With Blood

PARIS, June 5.—In their repeated attacks on Fort Vaux, one of the outlying defenses of Verdun along the front east of the Meuse, the Germans are hurrying forward their infantry in masses so compact that the first ranks are obliged to advance to certain death. The assaulting columns descend from the village of Damloup, below the fort and separated from it by a ravine which they are obliged to cross to attain the slopes near the fort. For three days this spot has been the scene of carnage which has saturated the ground with blood. One German column advanced no farther than the bottom of the ravine. Men in the front ranks pushed on by those behind, fell as fast as they reached the dead line swept by the French quick fire. As they toppled over others came on to take their place and fall in turn.

French officers who have returned from the Verdun front, although hardened to the worst sights of war, declare that the butchery there surpasses imagination.

SHOT THROUGH HEAD

U.S. Marine Officer Killed at Santo
Domingo—Additional Marines
Ordered Out—Situation Serious

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Dominican rebels who fled from Puerto Plata and Monte Cristi at the approach of American marines, have strongly entrenched themselves outside of the latter town. A despatch to the state department today from Minister Russell at Santo Domingo gave further details of the occupation of the town and indicated that the situation on the island was more serious than had been believed here.

A paraphrase of the minister's message follows:

"After 24 hours' notice marines were landed on June 1 at Monte Cristi and Puerto Plata. The fort at Puerto Plata was occupied after resistance of two hours. One marine officer probably fatally wounded. Fort and town of Monte Cristi occupied without resistance, but rebels strongly entrenched outside of the town."

The wounded marine officer was Capt. Herbert J. Hirschinger, commanding the detachment from the battleship, Rhode Island, who died at Puerto Plata June 1. He was shot through the head while directing the landing of his men.

MORE MARINES SENT

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The United States transport Hancock at Vera Cruz today had orders to proceed immediately to New Orleans to take aboard between five and six hundred additional marines for Santo Domingo. They will reinforce Rear Admiral Caperton's command in protecting lives and property of foreigners in the revolution-torn republic.

COL. ROOSEVELT TALKS AWAIT REPUBLICANS

NOT GOING TO CHICAGO—URGED
AS CANDIDATE OF "AMERICAN PARTY"

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., June 5.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt made public today a letter he received from W. F. Zierath, counselor of the state medical society of Wisconsin, in which the latter, who said he was of German descent and a democrat, urged the colonel, "if not nominated by the republicans, to be standard bearer of an independent party—an American party."

Zierath said he had never voted for Col. Roosevelt, but he hoped to have that pleasure, adding: "Your firm stand against the hyphen is not going to lose you votes."

Col. Roosevelt will motor to New York tomorrow to see his publishers. He still insists he has no intention of going to Chicago, but is keeping in close touch with the political situation there by telephone. One of his secretaries remains near this end of the private wire day and night.

ANCIENT AND HONORABLE
BOSTON, June 5.—The Ancient and Honorable Artillery company today held its customary ceremonies in celebrating its 275th anniversary. As for many years, the company marched through the city to attend a service at the Old South church, had its drill and review at the common, and there held the annual drum-head election. Col. Walter E. Lombard, former commander of the coast artillery corps of the state militia, was elected captain.

PROGRESSIVES NOT TO NOMINATE
CANDIDATE UNTIL NEXT SATURDAY

CHICAGO, June 5.—The progressive national committee today decided to withhold nominating a candidate in the program until next Saturday, awaiting the action of the republican convention.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION

MISSISSIPPI LEVEE DAMAGE AND
HARRISON DRUG LAW CASES DECIDED

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Another attempt by land owners along the Mississippi to proceed against the government on account of floods alleged to have been caused by levee building, failed today when the supreme court decided the Mississippi river commission should not be enjoined from constructing or repairing levees.

The supreme court interpreted the Harrison federal drug act of 1914, making it unlawful for any person not registered under the law to have opium in his possession, as applying only to those who deal in the drug and not to those who use it.

BRANDEIS TAKES OATH

BOSTON MAN TOOK SEAT AS AN ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Louis D. Brandeis of Boston today took seat as an associate justice of the supreme court, the 52nd citizen to rise to that high distinction. Chief Justice White privately administered the oath.

MCCORMACK SAVED THEIR LIVES

But for the presence of mind and prompt action of Edward J. McCormack, the well known swimmer, two young men whose names could not be learned, would have found a watery grave in the water of Lake Massacuppis last night.

The two young men had hired a canoe and evidently they were not familiar with the frailty of the craft for about 5:30 o'clock when at a point in front of the pavilion at Lakeview, the canoe was overturned and both men dumped into the water. They managed to grab hold of the boat after coming to the surface but were tired when Mr. McCormack came to their assistance and with the help of others succeeded in bringing them ashore.

AUSTRIAN SUCCESS

VIENNA, Sunday, June 4, via Berlin and wireless to Sayville, June 5.—Notwithstanding staunch resistance by the Italians, the Austro-Hungarian troops have made further gains in their offensive, the war office announced today and yesterday took 5500 prisoners.

OFF TO CONVENTION

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 5.—The 10 delegates from Rhode Island to the republican national convention left this morning on a special train. They are headed by Gov. R. Livingston Burdette and will vote for Justice Hughes on the first ballot.

NEWS FROM CITY HALL

MAYOR O'DONNELL ASKED TO HELP MAN FIND A WIFE, HERE
—BUBBLE FOUNTAIN THIEVES

There's a fellow by the name of Gus Jannell who is looking for a wife and if this catches the eye of any girl looking for a husband she can get all the details from the mayor, for we are not going to give Gus' address. Gus hates old maids and the lady to whom he would extend the right hand of fellowship far better for worse, must be very sweet and jolly. If she shows anything that would suggest an auto elopement, Gus will have nothing to do with her. Read his letter to the mayor:

Kind Sir:
Will you please give my address to a plain young widow who would like to correspond with a bachelor aged 30. The lady must be well educated, respectable and jolly. No old maids need write. I hate them.

Very truly,
Gus Jannell.

City Hall Meeting

The municipal council will meet tomorrow at which time it is expected that last steps will be taken in the new city hall. There is a big raft of routine business to come before the meeting. The park commission will meet this evening and the school board will meet tomorrow. Information concerning them will be given out Friday morning, after having been passed upon by the school board Thursday evening.

The New High School

Commissioner James E. Donnelly nearly slid off his chair when today if the wreckers, Swift and McNutt, would be out of Kirk and Anne streets in time for Architect Henry L. Bourke to get busy on the new high school. All of the buildings in Kirk street between the high school and the church have been razed and the wreckers will be out there before July 1. It will be remembered that the wreckers asked for an extension of time because of the Day Nursery's delay in moving, the municipal council having granted the day nursery an extension of time representing a month or more. The matter of extension so far as the wreckers were concerned was left to Commissioner Donnelly and he gave them until July 1. "They will be out of there a good many weeks, before the architect will appear on the scene," said Commissioner Donnelly.

The wreckers are getting rid of the brick as quickly as possible and on one day last week 45,000 bricks were removed. A great many of the brick will be used in the construction of the new French church in Centralville.

Robbing Bubble Fountains

The latest thief to be added to the calendar of rogues in this city is the bubble fountain thief. The park commission added nine new bubble fountains to the parks and commons and it was stated this morning that the plumbing had been ripped out of no less than six of them. The robbers are considerable enough, it was stated.

HALIFOUX'S
ON THE SQUARE

When you go to a restaurant, what recourses have you if a glass is finger marked, the bread stale, your steak under-cooked or a fork discolored? Why, you complain, and the trouble is remedied immediately. If it wasn't, you would never go back—never forget—never let a friend go there.

Will you do us a favor? Remember conditions are the same here. We will remedy the slightest dissatisfaction IMMEDIATELY and be glad to have the chance to prove our willingness.

LOWELL GENERAL HOSPITAL

Mayor James E. O'Donnell has received an invitation to attend the graduation exercises for the nurses of the Lowell General Hospital to be held Thursday, June 15, at 4 o'clock. The mayor is asked to address the graduates.

Playground Apparatus

The park department has been doing a good job on the Chamber street playground and the apparatus will be installed this week. The park department started work on the flower beds in the parks and commons today. The deer at Fort Hill are proving quite an attraction and teachers from various public schools take their children there to see them. There will be visitations of boys and girls to the park every day this week.

BASCOM BLOCK

One of Owners Denies Reported Sale—Say
No Truth in Story

It was reported in a local Sunday paper yesterday that the Bascom block in Merrimack street had been sold to the Richard Healy Co. of Worcester and that the purchasing company would soon establish a branch of its business in this city.

Edward C. Bascom of Weymouth, one of the owners of the block, when questioned over the telephone by a Sun reporter this afternoon, emphatically denied the statement. He said the block has not been sold and as far as he knows no individual or company has any option on the property. Mr. Bascom requested "The Sun" to deny the statement, saying there is not the slightest foundation for it and such a report at this time is injurious to his business interest.

NO BALL GAME

Rain Caused Postponement of Lowell-Portland Game

The severe storm that came down the Merrimack valley early this afternoon converted Spaulding park into a veritable lake and caused the postponement of the Lowell-Portland game. The Portland players arrived in town and were already to leave their hotel for the ball grounds when the rain began. The team will remain here until tomorrow.

With Coco Woodman, a former Buffalo Federal league pitcher, ready to report for a try-out, a game today would probably have resulted in a shake-up in the pitching staff of the local team. While Woodman failed to make good with Lynn his arm is said to contain some good stuff yet and if this is true he will make some of the pitchers who have yet failed to show anything sit up and take notice.

JITNEY CASES IN COURT

Ten of Them Plead Not Guilty to Charge of Violating Ordinance—Other Cases

The so-called "jitney" cases, in which there are ten defendants who it is alleged violated a city ordinance by allowing machines for hire to remain in the vicinity of Paige and Bridge streets, were called before Judge Enright in the police court this morning.

Frederic S. Harvey, Esq., appeared for the government and Daniel Donahue, Esq., for the defendants.

Counsel agreed that there was no necessity of introducing witnesses Mr. Donahue admitting that his clients had located their automobiles in the vicinity in question, his contention being that the municipal council had no right to enact the ordinance in question.

The defendants in the case are Lynwood D. Foster, Mitty Hornosh, Joseph Raitola, Roy L. Gilnes, Patrick F. Keegan, Henry Lamontagne, Charles A. Lefebvre, Louis A. Gebb, Emilio Feller and Joseph Stuer. Each of the defendants is an operator of a jitney and had been in the habit of parking their machines in Paige street near Bridge street. On April 25th the municipal council passed an ordinance, one section of which read as follows:

"No motor vehicle used for carrying passengers for hire shall be allowed to stand waiting for passengers or employment on Paige street or on Bridge street within 50 feet of said Paige street except at a stand assigned to the owner of said vehicle by the municipal council of the city of Lowell."

This law went into effect ten days after its passage and the maximum fine is $10.

One permit was granted to Amos P. Best and the other "jitney" operators felt that this action was partial, and continued to park their machines in Paige street and accept passengers.

When the ten defendants appeared in police court this morning, Lawyer Donahue entered a plea of not guilty. Lawyer Harvey presented a copy of the ordinance passed by the municipal council and Assistant City Clerk William P. McCarthy testified that the ordinance went into effect on May 8, of this year, and that but one permit was granted, that being given to Amos P. Best.

Lawyer Harvey cited certain decisions bearing on the matter, laying particular stress on the importance of the case of Commonwealth vs. Stoddard, wherein it provided that certain portions of streets should be restricted from obstruction by vehicles for the welfare, safety and convenience of the public.

He stated to the court that the defendants, knowing that the ordinance had been passed, had violated the law intentionally and said that in event of the court finding the defendants guilty he felt that the maximum penalty should be imposed.

Lawyer Donahue then asked Mr. Harvey who his client was.

"I have no client," answered Mr. Harvey.

"You are here as a matter of charity, I take it?"

"As a matter of charity," said Mr.

Donahue.

After considerable argument on the legal points Judge Enright took the matter under advisement.

HARVARD SQUAD OFF

CAMBRIDGE, June 5.—The Harvard rowing squad, comprising the several varsity and freshmen crews and their substitutes, numbering 42 men, left today for New London, Conn., where they will prepare for the annual regatta with Yale on the Thames, June 22 and 23.

Robert F. Herriek, graduate coach in charge of the crew, stated the men were in good shape with few exceptions.

LANSING RAPS CRITICS

Scores Those Who Claim U. S. More Vigorous With Germany Than With Great Britain

WATERTOWN, N. Y., June 5.—Secretary Lansing before the Jefferson County Bar association here Saturday night scored critics of the administration's foreign policy who would have it do more than has been done in the negotiations arising from the war and replied to those who complain the United States has been more vigorous in its dealings with Germany than with Great Britain.

"The violation of the natural right of life is a much more serious offense against an individual and against his nation," said Secretary Lansing, "than the violation of the legal right of property. Can you doubt for a moment which one gives this government the greatest concern?"

That there was an influence in America and even in congress which put right of property and right of life on a par, Secretary Lansing declared, showed that the "great heart" of the republic is threatened with fatty degeneration through those who have lost their patriotic vigor; that many Americans have become lovers of ease rather than lovers of national honor.

Mr. Lansing read his address. He said he felt compelled to do so that he might not be misunderstood. The principal part of his address follows: "The great war has caused so many conditions which are entirely new and presented so many questions which were never before raised or even thought of that it has been no easy task to meet and answer them. The relations between neutrals and belligerents were never more difficult of adjustment. It was never harder to preserve neutral rights from invasion by the desperate opponents in the titanic conflict in which the power, if not the life of the great empires of the earth is at stake. The peoples and governments at war are blinded by passion; their conduct frequently influenced by hysterical impulses and approach to madness. Patience and forbearance are essential to a neutral in dealing with such nations. Acts, which under normal conditions would be most offensive, must be considered calmly and without temper. It is an extraordinary situation and requires extraordinary treatment with regard for the mental state of those who are striving every nerve to defeat their enemies and to that end using every possible means to weaken them in their industrial as well as their military power.

"In a nutshell the situation of our relations with Great Britain and Germany, the two powers with which we have had our principal controversies, is this: "Germany, having developed the submarine as an offensive engine of destruction, asserts that she cannot, on account of the resulting conditions, conform to the established rules of naval warfare and we should not, therefore, insist on strict compliance. Great Britain has no sympathy with the German point of view and demands that the submarines observe the rules of visit and search without exception.

"On the other hand Great Britain declares that, on account of the new conditions resulting from submarine activity and the use of mines and from the geographical position of Germany, she cannot conform to the established rules of blockade and contraband, and we should not therefore hold her to strict compliance with those rules. Germany insists, nevertheless, that Great Britain be made to follow the existing law.

"Both governments have adopted the same arguments based primarily on military necessity and offer the same excuses for their illegal acts, but neither will admit that the other is in any way justified for its conduct. Now what is the United States to do in these circumstances? If we admit that the arguments advanced are sound—and I am sure no one will deny that they are more or less reasonable—and submit to charges in the rules of naval warfare, we will be without any standard of neutral rights. Conceding that the rules can be modified by a belligerent to meet new conditions, how far could a belligerent go in changing the rules? Would not the liberties of neutrals on the high seas be at the mercy of every belligerent? As it is under the old rules, neutrals suffer enough when a state of war exists. They should not be further restricted in the exercise of their rights.

"The only alternative, therefore, is for this government to hold firmly to the neutral rights which international law has clearly defined and to insist vigorously on their observance by all belligerents. In not the slightest degree can the settled rules be modified unless all the parties interested consent to the modifications.

"If Germany finds it difficult or impossible to conform to the rules of the international naval code, or if Great Britain finds it equally difficult to obey the rules of blockade and contraband, that is their misfortune. They certainly cannot expect neutral nations to submit without resistance to further invasions of their rights. This has been the position of the United States from the beginning of the war. It was twice sought to obtain mutual consent from the belligerents to certain changes in the rules, but in both cases it failed and the suggestions were withdrawn.

"It is just that the rights violated by the belligerents may differ in importance and therefore require different treatment. Thus the violation of the natural right of life is a more serious offense against an individual and against his nation than the violation of the legal right of property. There is not and cannot be adequate recompense for the wrongful destruction of life, but property losses may be satisfied by the payment of indemnities. If one belligerent violates the right of life and another belligerent violates the right of property, can you doubt for a moment which one gives this government the greatest concern, or which one will call forth the more vigorous protest and the more earnest effort to prevent repetitions of the offense?

"A government which places life and property on an equality would be generally condemned and justly condemned. This seems to me an axiom and yet I regret to say, there are some Americans who do not recognize this difference. How many take this view it is impossible to say, but the number is large, judging by the letters and telegrams received in Washington. Indeed, it is held by some who sit in the halls of congress. These people openly complain that the government does not exert as much pressure to protect American property as it does to protect American lives—property which can be restored to the owners or an indemnity paid; lives which can never be restored or adequately indemnified.

"This mental attitude makes one wonder if the sensibilities of the American people have become so blunted by materialism that they think as much of the loss of their property as they do of the loss of lives of their fellow-countrymen. Such an idea is repugnant to a liberty-loving American; it is utterly wanting in the nobler compass of a true patriot. It is hostile to the spirit of true Americanism. Yet it exists and is widespread and must be reckoned with.

"With the knowledge that a number of citizens prefer to have their material interests protected even to the extent of not insisting on our rights, the conduct of our foreign relations is made most difficult. How extensive this influence is no one can say with certainty. That it exists at all is bad enough, for it shows that we do not all think true; that the great heart of the republic is threatened with fatty degeneration through those who have lost their patriotic vigor; that many Americans have become lovers of ease rather than lovers of national honor.

"This attitude of mind of a portion of our people, as I said, increases the difficulties of diplomacy. It is almost impossible to present a strong and unbending front in a controversy unless a united and determined nation is behind you. Furthermore, the knowledge that our people are not a unit in supporting a vigorous policy encourages a foreign government to resist our protests, feeling sure that we must withdraw or modify them. It is not a pleasant position, I firmly believe that the American people will one of these days crush out this influence and become as they should be, a great united nation, jealous of their rights and eager to defend their honor regardless of personal sacrifice. Americans with all that that term implies of patriotism, loyalty and zeal, must be from this time forth the great standing policy of this republic.

"When you disapprove of some course of action taken by this government, be lenient in your judgment, for very often a nation cannot be made public and which may never be made public. It is always my wish, and I know that it is the wish of the president, to take people into our confidence, to tell them frankly what the situation is, but you must realize that I cannot be done in every case. They must try to be patient and to trust the government to do the very best it can in upholding the national honor and dignity.

"Let me add just a word. When the foreign policies of the government are criticized by honest critics—I mean by honest critics whose motives are not influenced solely by political considerations or personal ambitions—I often wonder what the critics would do if they had the responsibility. Would they be so belligerent? Would they make demands when it was questionable whether they could compel compliance? Would they count the full cost of their action? I wonder whether they would be radical or conservative? Responsibility makes a world of difference in a man's point of view. When a few words may plunge this country into war the man who has the power to utter those words will think a long, long time, before he exercises that power. He will submit to a deal of criticism and endure abuse and ridicule rather than see the young men of his country sent forth to die on the battlefield. Only the supreme necessity of maintaining the honor of the United States or of defending its independence and the liberties of its people will induce him to speak the fateful words which may bring death to thousands of his fellow countrymen and change the destinies of the republic.

"Those who are prone to blame the government because it does not demand and threaten ought to consider very seriously what it would mean to the nation if their wishes were carried out. If they were responsible for the consequences would they give the counsel which, as private citizens, they are so ready to give?"

BUSINESS BATTALION

LIEUT. NICHOLS OF COAST ARTILLERY TO BE INSTRUCTOR IN LOWELL

First Lieut. W. R. Nichols of the Coast Artillery Corps, stationed at Fort Strong in Boston Harbor, has been appointed instructor officer for the Business Men's battalion of Lowell. This is in response to a request made in the early days of the organization of the battalion. Lieut. Nichols has been invited to be present at the drill next Wednesday night. The lecture by Major Frank Hall, U.S.A., scheduled for Wednesday night has been put over until June 28 in order to give an entire evening next Wednesday for drilling. The prospect that the battalion will march in the preparedness parade on Wednesday, June 14, in the evening, renders it essential that a few more marching movements be practiced at once.

SACRED HEART SCHOOL

The attendance at the annual school closing exercises by the junior grades of the Sacred Heart school, which were held in the school hall last evening, was very large and all present spent a most pleasant evening. The program complete was as follows: Opening chorus, "O Mother Bless"; "Reap the Flax," fourth grade girls; "Taffy Was a Welshman," song, little boys; "I See You," singing game, little girls; "Teigh Diddle Diddle," first grade boys; "The Lovely Month of June," singing game, first grade girls; "Tailors," singing game, second grade boys; "That's What I'd Do," song, third grade girls; calisthenics, fourth grade boys; "Up in a Tree," action song, fifth grade girls; sailors, fifth grade boys; dumb-bell exercise, sixth grade boys; dumb-bell exercise, sixth grade girls; "Good-night Song," sixth grade girls. Teacher of calisthenics, Miss Norma Benet; accompanist, Miss M. McDonough, E. Sheehan, M. McFadden.

STRUCK BY AN AUTO

Agnes Connors, aged six years and living at 28 Carlisle street, was struck by the fender of an automobile operated by Harry M. Blizard of 4 Wilder avenue, Roxbury, about 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and sustained abrasions about the face. It is said that the little one ran in front of the machine and the driver was unable to stop his car before it struck her. She was placed in the automobile and taken to St. John's hospital where she received treatment.

AUTO CAUGHT FIRE

A six-cylinder touring car belonging to Undertaker Amador Archambault was damaged by fire shortly after 3:30 o'clock last night at a point near the railroad station in Tyngsboro. A young man employed by Mr. Archambault was alone in the car at the time and is unable to say what caused the fire, which broke out suddenly near the engine while the automobile was in motion. The Tyngsboro fire department responded to a call and stifled the blaze, but not before it had considerably damaged the machine. There was no insurance on the car.

of the general court will begin special investigations of four subjects of very great interest to the people of the commonwealth, and it is expected that the research required will necessitate continuance of the investigations right up to the time of the convening of the next general court.

Very frequently recess committees are looked upon by the public at large as sinecures, created by the presiding officers of the legislature for the purpose of keeping certain legislators busy while they are away from the state house during the year. That those created this year, certainly, cannot be subjected to any such criticism. Perhaps the most important of this year's special investigations will be that into the question of workmen's compensation insurance rates—a subject which means much not alone to employers who have to pay the rates, but of far-reaching importance to employees as well, because industry can stand only so much expense in competition with other states, and if it is required to pay excessive amounts in the form of insurance it will have less to pay in the form of wages.

Next in importance comes the question of revising the building laws of the commonwealth, particularly those in relation to school houses, in order that they may be more adequately protected against such fire horrors as that at Teabody last October, when twenty school children lost their lives. A third investigation is to be into the general subject of social insurance, including old age pensions, insurance against unemployment, and various allied phases of the social problem. The committee entrusted with this investigation has also been directed to study the question of limiting eight hours per day the hours during which any person may be employed in an industry operating continuously for twenty-four hours; at present employees in certain of the paper mills operated in the commonwealth are required to work eleven and thirteen hours per day, alternating each week.

Then there is to be an investigation of the financial condition of the Boston Elevated Railway company, its officials having reported to the governor that the corporation is unable to finance the many improvements in service demanded by the traveling public. Under the law, the corporation cannot sell its stock at less than par, and no one can be found to buy it at that figure, and as it can issue no more bonds than are equal to the value of its outstanding stock, the practical effect of the present law is to prevent the issue of either stock or bonds.

Hence a select commission, consisting of Lieutenant Governor Calvin Coolidge, President Walls of the Senate, Speaker Cox of the House, Senator Eldridge of Scituate and Bates of Boston, Representatives Jewett of Lowell, Newhall of Stoneham, Lawlor of Boston and Donovan of Boston, with the members of the public service and transit commissions, was created to consider the advisability of passing such legislation as may be necessary to permit the corporation to raise money.

All of the commissions are expected to organize within a few days, and to begin at once the study of their respective problems.

SHAKSPERE FESTIVAL IS 100 YEARS OLD RECLUSE DIED IN BED

MAYOR CURLEY INVITES PLAYERS TO GIVE SCENES OUTDOORS IN BOSTON JULY 4TH

BOSTON, June 5.—Boston's Fourth of July this year is to be a combined celebration in honor of American independence from England and the literary genius of England—William Shakspeare.

Announcement was made from city hall last night that plans are under way for a mammoth outdoor Shakspeare festival to be held in Boston on the afternoon of July 4 and to be participated in by some of the greatest stage artists in the country.

In anticipation of the event Mayor Curley has already forwarded invitations to Robert B. Mantell, Miss Viola Allen, Thomas A. Wise, Genlivo Hamper, Frederick Lewis, John Drew, Edward Vroom, Miss Henrietta Crossman, Sir Herbert Beerthorn Tree, Lynn Harding, William Faversham, James O'Neil, Mrs. Richard Mansfield (Beatrice Cameron), William H. Crane, Mrs. Julia Arthur Cheney, Miss Mary Shaw and Wilton Lackaye.

The following letter, written by the mayor and accompanying each invitation, tells its own story:

"The city of Boston is planning as part of the Shakspeare tercentenary observance a great out-of-doors performance of scenes from Shakspeare's plays for the afternoon and evening of July 4. The idea is to bring the genius of Shakspeare home to the masses as the great expression of the common mind and emotions of humanity.

"Beautiful and appropriate settings are available in our public parks and playgrounds and outside those of our public buildings which are noted for their classic architecture.

"In this unique and popular presentation of Shakspeare's works it is earnestly desired to enlist the cordial co-operation of those leaders of the legitimate stage who may find it possible to perform a bit of Shakspeare upon such an occasion as this which we know will attract thousands of people.

"Because you are one who recognizes how deeply the stage is indebted to William Shakspeare, I have the honor to invite you to lend us the aid of your splendid talent in making this Boston celebration a superb dramatic success. I ask you to render whatever you may choose from Shakspeare and that you will favor me both with an acceptance of this invitation and notice of your choice of scene at the earliest moment.

"For whatever sacrifice you may make in this regard you may be assured of the immediate and constant appreciation of our entire citizenship."

GRAND OLD WOMAN OF WHITMAN CELEBRATES HUNDRETH BIRTHDAY

WHITMAN, June 5.—Mrs. Maria Whitman Reed, "Grandma" Reed, the oldest and surely the best beloved woman in all the Old Colony district, yesterday celebrated her 100th birthday together with her sons and every one of her direct descendants in five generations of the Reed family.

It was a wonderful day for Grandma Reed. But then she is a wonderful woman. It is said that only one person in 100,000 lives to know the wonders a full century may bring forth. Still rarer are they who live to appreciate and use these wonders to their full extent. Grandma Reed, keen-minded, bright-eyed, healthful, and well informed by her constant reading on all matters of the day, was as keenly alive to all the joyous sights and sounds and pleasures of this centennial as were her jubilant little great-grandsons, to whom she dispensed candies and laughter in payment for their pranks with alarming generosity.

The people of Whitman Saturday tendered her a reception in connection with a church fair.

Nearly 500 people came from all over the district from Brockton to Plymouth to greet her, and she stood up with a little old-fashioned bouque such as the belles of 70 years ago carried and shook hands with every one of them. That was quite a task in itself, but she returned home and even refused to take a nap after her exciting celebration.

Then came the actual day, June 4, the one day in a hundred years, and with its sunshine came generation after generation of her children and children's children.

She lives with her eldest son, Clinton W. Reed of School street. More than half a century ago she sent him forth to the Civil war, and he is one of the very few Grand Army veterans whose mother is now living.

Her other sons, Nahum S. Reed and Frank A. Reed of Brockton, appeared, proud of their mother as never before and bearing the heritage of her strength and health.

Her grandsons, Nahum Reed and Carl A. Reed, came from their nearby homes in Whitman. Dwight Reed of Melrose completed the roster. The great-grandchildren included Fred S. Reed of Plymouth, Howard C. Reed and Ida M. Reed of Whitman. Fred Reed brought his children, her great-grandchildren, Harrison E. Clinton L. and Beatrice Eleanor Reed. Beatrice is just six weeks old, and her presence completed the family tree to its topmost twig. Every one of Mrs. Reed's direct descendants was present.

It was a distinguished gathering for Mrs. Reed herself is a direct descendant of John Alden and Priscilla.

SEARCHERS FOUND DEEDS WORTH $30,000 AND BANKBOOKS REPRESENTING $20,000

HAVERHILL, June 5.—Worried because they had not seen Patrick McBride, a wealthy recluse, since Monday, neighbors yesterday battered in the doors of his house on Kenos avenue and found him dead in bed. They found notes and deeds to property valued at $30,000 and bankbooks that represented at least $20,000 more in their search of the house.

He has no known relative living and the body was sent to the Linwood cemetery tomb after Medical Examiner John F. Croston had pronounced death due to natural causes. The burial will take place on Tuesday unless his body is claimed before that time.

WOMEN'S GOLF TOURNAMENT

MANCHESTER, Mass., June 5.—Prominent women golfers gathered at the Essex County club today for the opening play in the Women's Eastern Golf association championship tournament. Fifty-two players were entered, including Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, who has held the title three times; Miss Vera Ramsey, Miss Harriot S. Curtis, Miss G. M. Bishop, Mrs. C. F. Fox and Miss Florence McNeely. Mrs. H. C. Vanderbeck, the present champion, was unable to compete because of illness.

THE BRITISH HELMET

LONDON, June 5.—The value of the helmets which are now being supplied to the British troops at the front is indicated in an article in the current issue of the British Medical Journal which says that in a big fight where the Britishers were wearing the new helmets the number of penetrating gunshot wounds of the head was equal to less than one-half of one per cent. and the total number of fractures of the skull was under one per cent. of all injuries. Head wounds have been set down, upon the experience of recent wars, as accounting for 15 per cent. of all casualties, and the latest data show that, in trench fights at least, the percentage is as high as 25.

"The British helmet," the Journal explains, "protects the side and back of the neck and the temples and of the upper part of the face as well, of course, as the top and sides of the head. It has a smooth round top. It stands away from the head about one-third of an inch all around, the weight being borne by a padded leather band fixed to the inner side of the surrounding steel by a series of India rubber buffers, each about the thickness of a lead pencil, and about one inch long. This detail of construction constitutes perhaps the most important difference between the British and French helmets. The buffers are capable of diffusing and neutralizing the force of a blow, which, falling on the closely fitted French helmet, would be conducted direct to the brain-pan."

THE DUBLIN REVOLT

INTERESTING STORY TOLD BY MILITARY OFFICER WHO WAS MADE PRISONER AFTER OUTBREAK

The following story of a prisoner arrested by the Sinn Fein rebels in Dublin is taken from an Irish paper, the Mexican Independent, and is of interest as giving an inside view of the trouble:

Capt. R. K. Brewster, J. R. Lyall, Athlone, formerly of the Royal Irish regiment, having been interviewed by our representatives, gives us the following short account of his experiences in Dublin during the recent disturbances:

On Monday, 24th April, accompanied by my chauffeur, motored to Dublin, entering the city through Phoenix park about 4 p. m. Everything was very quiet, very few people about; no one stopped me or gave any hint of unusual occurrences. I noticed on the quay that there were no police or military to be seen and that the trains were not running. Coming round a curve near the Four Courts I was stopped by a barricade, made of carts and heavy furniture. Two young men in picturesque green uniforms with rifles and fixed bayonets held me up and informed me that I was their prisoner. I asked what was up. My captor informed me that "war was declared." Said I, "with whom?" Reply: "With the British."

After parleying for a little he pointed his bayonet at my chest and said I must go to his captain. On the way he informed me that his captain had captured the bank, the postoffice and in fact all the public buildings; that three contingents of Germans were landing in Dublin, and that the Irish regiments had refused to turn out. Inside the courts I was received by Captain Fawcett, who refused to let me go. My chauffeur, who I found one officer in uniform (who happened to be passing through Dublin) a prisoner before me. There were about 30 or 40 men, mostly in plain clothes, at the back entrance to the courts. Rifles and ammunition were being issued to them and some were being shown the breach action of the rifles. One shot went off accidentally within five yards of me. We were taken across the central hall and conducted to King's Bench Court No. 2. In the course of a few hours more prisoners were brought in, viz., a young officer and an army chaplain in uniform, a retired militia officer in plain clothes, three Metropolitan police constables, a soldier and two civilians. After dusk we five officers were given the judge's room with access to the court. We dined on something called "tea" and bread and glad to get it. Next day (Tuesday) another officer was added to our number. He, with Lord Dunsaney, also in uniform, motored along the quays, and no one giving any warning, had come to the barricade. Several shots were fired.

Lord Dunsaney was wounded in the cheek, his chauffeur in the hand. The officer jumped out and went behind the car for cover; he then came out holding up his hands. The two wounded men were allowed to walk with assistance to the Richmond hospital, then in the hands of the Sinn Feiners. The officer was incarcerated with us. We remained in the same room and court until Friday; our captors were increasingly kind and civil. As the days went on I could see that they were getting more and more strained from want of rest and sleep. Day and night there was rifle fire and bombing all round us. We could hear the bullets from the rooms at the south side of the river rattling on the building at right angles from our wing. We lived most of the time by electric light, keeping the shutters closed as a guard against ricochets or splinters. Our window was not under direct fire.

On Friday we were removed to a passage with solid walls, adjoining the Nisi Prius court, this to save us from shell fire which was expected. Before nightfall that day we were given a large room (I think the benches' council chamber) looking out across a court yard to the Metropolitan police court and Bridewell, both buildings being fortified and held by the insurgents. About 4 p. m. on Saturday things were so quiet in this court yard that we opened a window and got some air. Later on I heard an order given: "Cease firing, but stand to your posts. Desultory firing went on, but soon I heard the word passed: 'Cease firing; peace is declared.' About 6 p. m. we were released and went to the court yard in rear of main building, where we found the insurgents under the orders and superintendence of their own officers and a few Irish civilians. They were active, bringing their rifles, ammunition and belts to the railings through which they passed them to the soldiers outside, who piled them in the street ready for removal. When each man had delivered up his rifle he fell in, forming a line in a double rank. When all were formed up an escort of the Dublin Fusiliers was distributed front and rear. I heard the insurgents number before moving off and concluded there were at least 150 of them. These things took a considerable time, so it was about 8 p. m. when we proceeded with a military escort to the royal barracks where I was hospitably entertained by the officers, 10th Batt. Royal Dublin Fusiliers until Monday. On Monday I managed to recover my motor car which had been stowed at the barracks for nearly a week. It was struck by seven bullets, all, I think, from military rifles. It was also well looted, but that was not by the Sinn Feiners.

These are the heads of my experiences. Of course there were many conversations with Sinn Fein officers and various incidents, which, if rendered into journalistic, would be highly interesting though perhaps not quite accurate in the relating.

Fought Like Gentlemen

What impressed me most through the whole affair was the international military tone adopted by the Sinn Fein officers. They were not out for massacre, for burning or for loot. They were out for war, observing all the rules of civilized warfare and fighting clean. So far as I saw they fought like gentlemen. At first they were elated and evidently full of hope. As they were pressed by the troops and no doubt receiving bad news from outside, they looked anxious and tired, but still bore themselves well and maintained discipline amongst their men.

No Drinking

They had possession of the restaurant in the courts stocked with spirits and champagne and other wines, yet there was no sign of drinking. I was informed that they were all total abstainers. They treated their prisoners with the utmost courtesy and consideration, in fact they proved by their conduct what they are—men of education, incapable of acts of brutality, though, alas, misguided and fed up with lies and false expectations!

Gratitude to Officers

The officers with whom I came in contact were Captain Daly, Captain Fawcett, Lieut. McGuinness, Lieut. Duggan, and their sergeant major. To all of them I owe a debt of gratitude for their generous treatment of me and my fellow-prisoners.

Corsets

Correctly Fitted

The average woman will spend several days thinking about her new gown, and that same woman will often times buy her corset without even having it fitted. How can your gown be distinctive if your figure is not correctly corseted? Pay attention to the selection of your corset. This is of prime importance.

Frolaset Front Laced Corsets

Are designed and fitted by the makers for and on living models. Every detail is given the closest attention. There isn't a thing that isn't just so. Each model is intended for a certain figure and most admirably do they fit the figure for which they are intended.

Miss Watt will be with us for four days this week to demonstrate and fit Front Laced Corsets. Let her fit you.

LOWELL MAN MURDERED

Jesse Milliken Murdered on His Way From Lumber Camp to Lowell—Body in River

Jesse Milliken, who left a lumber camp in Penobscot, Me., last April to visit his mother in this city, was killed and robbed according to the police officials who have been working on the case. His body was found in the river between Gorham and Berlin, Coos county, New Hampshire, and at first it was thought the man had committed suicide. Later, however, an autopsy was held and revealed that Milliken had died of a broken neck and it was also discovered that his right ear had been torn off before the body had been thrown into the river.

As the body was clothed only in an undershirt and stockings, the identification of the man was not made until it was learned that a boy had found some discarded garments from 35 to 40 rods from the place at which the body was found. A search of the pockets brought to light several articles, including keys and a metallic tag with "C. V. L. Co. 6969" upon the latter. At the Connecticut Valley Lumber Co., it was learned that a man registering under this number was Jesse Milliken, whose former home was in St. George, N. H. He was working in the Penobscot camp in 1915 and this year left the camp in April, apparently intending to visit his mother in Lowell.

BOOM FOR HUGHES

Justice will continue to preserve his silence while he occupies a place on the supreme court bench, but that if nominated he will immediately make a satisfactory statement of his position on national questions which will be an issue in the campaign.

In discouraging proposals of a nomination statement from Justice Hughes his supporters point out that so far as his position on national issues is concerned, addresses made before he went on the bench show him to be for preparedness and sound, from a party point of view, on all of the more important issues.

It is being argued that lack of information regarding Mr. Hughes' declarations is wholly responsible for the charge that he is a "mystery candidate."

Gov. Whitman Talks

Word has gone out from Gov. Whitman's quarters that it is futile to look forward to any spectacular 11th hour move on the part of those who are demanding the jurist's nomination. Gov. Whitman also made it clear that no one of the men fighting for the nomination of Justice Hughes had direct word from him that their efforts have his approval.

In discussing the Hughes movement today, Gov. Whitman said he believed it had attained proportions of a boom and cannot be headed off.

On every hand there seems to be sentiment to avoid making the nominee the campaign issue and to select someone on whom republicans and progressives can agree so the word will go out to the country and that the party has been rehabilitated by the uniting the factions which split it four years ago. It is realized that of all the possibilities, Col. Roosevelt has the greatest personal following, but at the same time he has the most enemies.

The conviction that Col. Roosevelt would not be able to unite the party has led to general declarations in favor of the nomination of some strong man who may not have the popularity of Col. Roosevelt, but whose nomination would be a signal to the country that the factional strife has been ended.

All forces are careful not to express hostility to Col. Roosevelt or to say anything which would make it impossible for progressives to come back to a party. It is recognized that Roosevelt can prevent the nomination of any one or two men who may be urged by republican leaders, but that should he attempt to go farther than this, and as some say "scratch the whole ticket," the convention would be very likely to proceed without giving further consideration to his views. The attitude of men taking this position is summed by their statements that they "want Col. Roosevelt's help, but not his dictation." They are determined not to permit Roosevelt to name the ticket by a process of elimination.

One of the outstanding features of this convention is the absence of commanding leadership by the men who compose the "Old Guard." They are here and on the ground but they seem to have no definite control of affairs. There is a conspicuous lack of what every convention has known as "fixers" who came with plans for the platform all prepared and assurances that they were going in. Little groups of leaders who get together in conferences and arranged things and then practically brought them before the convention for ratification.

Favorite Son Candidates

Of all the favorite sons who will be presented to the convention, none is estimated to have the strength to command the delegates. The week supporters are continuing their claims of 200 or more votes on the first ballot. Senator Cummins' managers claim more than 100 votes on the first ballot and, in addition, say that Col. Roosevelt would support their man, but it is not generally believed that any of the favorite sons votes can be held all the way through.

Fred W. Estabrook, national committeeman from New Hampshire, said today he believed all but four candidates would be practically eliminated after the first ballot. He thinks Col. Roosevelt out of the race. The eight votes of his state, he thinks, will be scattered on the first ballot, two of them going to Hughes. Mr. Estabrook predicted that Hughes would continue to receive votes until a nomination was made.

Regardless of what action the republican and progressive conventions finally take, Victor Murdock of Kansas, chairman of the progressive national committee who arrived here today declared that the progressive party "must not and will not pass out of existence."

Mr. Murdock declined to predict the probable action of the progressives. James R. Gurnea of Ohio, Roosevelt leader, said political expediency was largely the cause of the progressives' failure to disclose any definite program regarding their support of Col. Roosevelt.

George W. Perkins of New York, recognized spokesman for the progressive party, issued a statement today reiterating that he was for harmony with the older party, but not for harmony at any price. He did not amplify this statement beyond saying he will not lose sight of the fact that too high a price can be paid for anything and that harmony was no exception to the rule.

FOR SUFFRAGE PLANK

Women Begin Fight at Chicago—Congressional Union is Now at Chicago

CHICAGO, June 5.—The Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage, an organization pledged to the support of the Susan B. Anthony suffrage amendment to the federal constitution opened its convention at the Blackstone theatre today for a three days' session during which time it is planned to form a body to be known as the woman's party.

Tomorrow the National American Woman Suffrage association, a federation of state suffrage associations, which favors a campaign for the adoption of suffrage by states will begin a two days' session at the Princess theatre.

The National association has prepared a plank calling for equal suffrage which will be presented for the republican convention Wednesday at the close of the suffrage parade, with the request that it be placed in the party's platform.

According to suffrage leaders, the women hold the balance of power, for the states in which they are allowed to vote cast one-fifth of the electoral vote and one-third of the votes necessary to elect a president. Their strength, they declare, will be swung to the party favoring suffrage and declaring for it.

LEGISLATIVE LULL

House Begins Consideration of Miscellaneous Bills—Members Go to Chicago

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Marking the first week of the legislative lull during the national political conventions period, the house today began consideration of miscellaneous bills. Party leaders on both sides of the capital had reached an agreement whereby the business of a routine nature should be taken up for the next two weeks to permit members of congress to attend the conventions. There will be no session of the senate until Thursday.

Most republican senators and representatives had departed today for Chicago. Democratic members will leave for St. Louis the latter part of the week.

TEDDY AGAINST HUGHES

Roosevelt Says That He Had Picked One Gold Brick, Meaning Taft—Did Not Mean to Pick Another

CHICAGO, June 5.—Col. Roosevelt has notified his followers over the telephone that he for one will not support Hughes definitely.

The colonel said that he had picked one gold brick, meaning Taft, and he did not propose to pick another.

MAY TIE UP NEWS

Nation-Wide Strike of Telegraphers May Be Called Tomorrow as Conventions Begin Sessions

NEW YORK, June 5.—The threatened nation-wide strike of telegraph operators may be called Tuesday just as the republican and progressive national conventions are about to open their first sessions in Chicago.

Officials of the Commercial Telegraphers Union of America, who have been empowered to take action against the Western Union Telegraph company, are now awaiting the report of the Massachusetts legislative investigation into the discharge of 11 men in the Western Union office in Boston. Should the investigation be without result, it is fully expected that the officials of the telegraphers will take the drastic action they contemplate and call out all their men.

According to a statement of S. J. Koenekamp, president of the Commercial Telegraphers union, the 20,000 commercial operators of the Western Union offices are anxious that a strike be called just when the wires will be necessary to carry the news of the political conventions in Chicago. Mr. Koenekamp is doubtful if the Western Union company will accept the offers of Roland B. Mahany, federal mediator, and he asserts that the telegraphers are a unit for a nation-wide strike.

DAVIS WON MARATHON

LOWELL BOY WINS 20-MILE EVENT WITH 65 ENTRIES—HAD START OF 10 MINUTES

NEW YORK, June 5.—A new American record for the 20 mile low hurdles, 13 3/4 seconds, was made yesterday by J. J. Eller of the Irish American Athletic club at a meet held in connection with the American Liberty day celebration in the new Sheepshead Bay speedway. The time was three-fifths of a second faster than Eller's record made in 1902. J. J. Norton, of Lehigh, Stanford, Jr., university was second, his time being 14 seconds.

Leroy A. Davis of the Hunting club of Lowell, Mass., won a 20-mile modified marathon handicap run in 2 hours, 3 minutes and 35 3/4 seconds. He had an allowance of 10 minutes. Thirty-five of the 65 starters finished.

MEETING OF FRIENDS OF IRISH FREEDOM PREPARATIONS FOR TAG DAY

A most enthusiastic public meeting was held last evening in Hibernian hall under the auspices of the Padraic H. Pearse branch Friends of Irish Freedom to make arrangements for the Irish Tag day that will be held in Lowell next Saturday, June 10. About 400 were in attendance, every seat being taken, with many standing at the back of the hall and before the close of the meeting all volunteered to aid in the work of Tag day.

Young ladies especially had been invited in order that a body of volunteer tag sellers might be organized and the names of over 100 were enrolled in the volunteer list. In the course of the meeting Miss Katherine A. Gaffney, president of the Ladies Auxiliary, A.O.H., announced that her organization would do everything possible to aid and that she would call the matter to the attention of the regular meeting on Tuesday.

Public Warned By Dr. King

Sounds Warning of Dangers of Pyorrhoia—Causes Loose Teeth.

Hundreds of busy people in this city are suffering from the "White Plague of the Teeth or Pyorrhoia," said Dr. King.

The disease is known as Riggs' disease, receding gums, sore gums, etc., and was formerly considered incurable but recent discoveries prove that the condition responds to treatment.

The great danger with pyorrhoia is that it is seldom detected until late stages and I want to warn the public that it is important to have an examination of the teeth before the condition advances.

DR. KING.

The first indication is reddening of the gums on close inspection. But the cause of the trouble is not in the gums, it is in the membrane covering the roots of the teeth. Here the little germs get in their deadly work and spread from one tooth to another until all are affected. As the disease progresses the tissue is destroyed and the germs are making the teeth loose in their sockets. In advanced cases pus forms around the teeth and every time one chews hard it forces the pus through the system. The gums become sore, spongy and bleed easily. Small pockets often form between the teeth and those affected soon drop out.

There is seldom any pain in the first stages of pyorrhoia and for this reason the patient is seldom aware that there is anything wrong until pus forms or the gums shrink. The disease starts in one tooth and the progress is so slow that it passes unnoticed.

The old method of treating this disease was very painful and consisted of scraping the roots of the teeth by a sharp instrument; this was very painful and often one preferred the disease to the treatment.

My new treatment is painless and does not necessitate scraping or harsh measures. No person afflicted with Riggs' disease should submit to the old treatment or have any teeth extracted until they visit my office for an examination. In order to give everyone an equal chance to fight this disease I will make an examination free of charge.

Here are my prices: Sets of teeth, $8.00; Gold crowns, $5.00; Gold fillings, $2.00; Bridge work, $5.00. All my work is guaranteed and absolutely painless. Special attention paid to nervous patients with sensitive teeth. If your teeth need attention it will pay you to see me first.

RESCUED FROM DROWNING

TWO YOUNG MEN HAD NARROW ESCAPE WHEN DUMPED FROM A CANOE

Two young men whose names could not be learned, but who are believed to be members of the Olympic club, had a narrow escape from drowning in Lake Masquepuie yesterday afternoon, when their canoe was upset. The young men were rescued by two other men, who rushed to their assistance in row boats.

According to the story, the two young men were paddling along in a canoe, when not very far from the shore at Lakeview their frail craft turned over, precipitating them into the deep water. Two men, who were walking along the shore at the time of the accident, saw the two young men struggling in the water and jumping into a rowboat, hurried to their aid. After considerable trouble they succeeded in bringing the two half-drowned men to the shore, the rescue being witnessed by several persons.

A PEOPLE'S COLLEGE

The outline of university extension education under state auspices, as given by Mr. Spahr of the state board Friday afternoon, reveals to Lowell an opportunity that should be embraced without delay. The new work is designed to meet a real need and it is being applied in a practical manner that appeals to the ordinary individual who heretofore has had more ambition than educational advantages.

University extension has been practiced for years by the leading colleges and universities of this country and every winter classes from Lowell have attended some of the private sessions in Boston. This necessitated frequent evening trips to Boston, with poor railroad accommodation and considerable expense, and those who persevered to the end deserve great credit. It will now be possible for men and women of this city to take superior courses in Lowell, practically free of charge and under the best educators in New England.

Three methods were mentioned by Mr. Spahr as receiving the sanction of the state board. The first is a correspondence system, given in 70 subjects, many of which will fill a public need and all of which are under the direction of experts. It will no longer be necessary for those who know of state generosity to enroll in distant schools which conduct correspondence on a purely commercial basis. Another is the "group" system which is an amplification of the correspondence course. At least ten students may get together for instruction in any subject and if they study in class the state will provide an instructor for every fourth meeting. This should be acted on by groups of men and women who may like to take up some academic or technical subject.

For those who desire to form classes, no time should be lost. It is necessary that 20 enroll in order to secure a professor and the state will agree to classes as often as the students desire them. The teachers organization should lose no time in forming a committee for organization and the board of trade might advantageously co-operate for the good of the public. We have begun to apply an educational system that has worked wonders in the west and in other parts of the country.

GREAT SEA BATTLE

As usual, reports of the great sea engagement between naval contingents of England and Germany off the coast of Denmark are somewhat contradictory, but it was the greatest naval engagement of the war and relatively speaking it appears to have been a victory for Germany. England admits that 14 warships have been sunk, some of them being ships of the first line, and Germany has lost two dreadnoughts and two or three battle cruisers with smaller craft which are not enumerated. Not until the end of the war will all the facts become known. If even then, but the admissions of England show very heavy losses in men and ships.

While the loss of 14 ships will not materially affect the size or strength of the British navy, the moral effect will be far reaching. Germany's navy is only a passive part of the German war program, but the English navy is the greatest single factor in the war plans of the allies. Germany has relied mainly upon her fighting on land as England upon the superiority of her fleet. Hence any crippling of the English navy would be the greatest blow to the cause of the allies. This is so serious for England in spite of the fact that Germany may have lost more ships.

Two points on which the conflicting reports utterly disagree are the number of ships engaged respectively and the immediate outcome of the fight. England says that a small section of her fleet met practically the entire German navy, while Germany says that the English outnumbered them in ships. The fact seems to be that the British cruiser fleet got too far away from the defending battleships and suffered severely before the latter got to their assistance. The battle was doubtless the greatest naval engagement in history, considering the aggregate loss of ships and men. This loss would be proportionately greater for Germany whose navy is but half the size of England's, but nothing can make up to England for the blow to her prestige until she wins a great victory on land or sea. Perhaps her statesmen will now stop wrangling and perhaps the masses of the people will wake up to the actual danger to the empire.

LEGISLATURE OF 1916

After a comparatively smooth and uneventful session the Massachusetts legislature of 1916 has been brought to a close and its doings have passed into history which shall not write many of its decisions in letters of gold. All in all, it was the same old grist of hardy annuals, the same committee reports, the same bickering and party maneuvers and the same noisy zeal for the public welfare until it was time to vote. Yet if it did not pass epoch-making laws, it did not run mad along radical lines and the public may look back with kindly feelings and commend those who took part. One fact above all others calls for congratulation; it was the shortest session since 1889, and it avoided the boredom dragging at the end which has tried the popular patience for many years.

While fewer acts were passed than for several years an idea of the business transacted may be gained from the fact that 308 general acts and 374 special acts were passed. Sixteen bills were vetoed by the governor, the latest being the trading stamps bill, and 13 bills were allowed to become law without his signature. On most of the measures throughout the session both the executive and legislative branches were in harmony and party divisions did not crop out conspicuously in the voting.

A gratifying feature of the session was the fewness of freak bills, showing that public opinion is becoming effective. The income tax law was passed by the most important bill probably though time will determine whether it will come up to the high predictions made by its supporters. Other bills passed were the act calling for a constitutional convention, the amendment of the workmen's compensation law, the act allowing daily payment to prisoners and acts in the interests of "preparedness." The lowering of the state tax is one of the much heralded achievements, though this was partly due to an increase in revenue from outside causes. If future sessions do as much good and as little harm, there will be little cause for complaint.

FLAG DESECRATION

Bouck White of the church of the state revolution, New York, has once again been sentenced to the penitentiary—this time for a desecration of the American flag. His specific offense was the burning of the Stars and Stripes with a number of other flags and the circulation of a cartoon representing his new flag floating above the flags of all nations. In the burning service the various flags were burned by men and women who had been born under them, respectively. For this type of madness the penitentiary is a poor cure as it helps to make a martyr out of White and his kind in the eyes of his followers, but the law does not countenance such acts. Sufficient renunciation of other flags is made by the good immigrants to this country who put aside all other flags when they swear allegiance to the flag of Uncle Sam. If America is not perfect Mr. White and other radicals can find work to do in getting the country back to the policies of Washington and Jefferson without starting any crazy scheme of socialism. It is work such as this that operates on little groups in all cities and supplies the men who throw knives at ex-presidents and hurl stones through the windows of Fifth avenue mansions. The pity of it is that anything so illegal and criminal should be done in the name of religion. The men who come to this country to spurn the flag should be deported and the men who having become citizens show a disrespect of the privileges thus conferred should be disfranchised.

SEEN AND HEARD

There are a lot of things that will rub out the poetical mood in time.

A Burden Bearer

"Where have you been, Mary Ann?" "I've been to the girls' improvement class, ma'am," was the maid's reply. "Well, what did the minister say to you? Did you tell him who your mistress was?" "Please, ma'am, he said I wasn't to give notice, as I intended, but that I was to consider you as my burden—and bear it."—Baltimore Star.

A Slight Exception

The lady who sat in the physician's consulting room was certainly stout. Her reason for seeing him was that he might prescribe some course of treatment which would reduce her too solid flesh, and after some consideration the doctor drew up a dietary for her, ordering her strictly to follow it and report to him in a month. At the end of that time she came back, looking stouter than ever. The physician was amazed.

"Are you quite sure you ate what I ordered?" he asked. "Everything," answered the patient. His brow wrinkled in perplexity. "And nothing else?" "Nothing whatever, doctor, except of course, my regular meals."—Exchange.

And 'Twas All True

said. "Our opponents tried to put our principles in a false light, but the people couldn't be fooled. They knew that the opposition's animal versions of our principles were as misleading as the bachelor's description of his sister's new baby."

"Asked to describe this new arrival, the bachelor replied: 'Um! Very small features, clean shaven, red-faced and a very hard drinker.'"

Humility's Power

A woman once came to the cave of a sage who was renowned for his profound analysis of her sex.

"Father," said she, "let me sit at your feet awhile, and teach me the faculty and foolish and weak—but I would fain be the pupil of your learning and the disciple of your virtues."

And the sage, secure in his wisdom, consented.

Then he laid himself down to sleep in the shade of a rock, with the stars of the night for his only light. When he awakened he was blindfolded and bound hand and foot—a prisoner to love.

He had protected himself against every feminine weapon except the most dangerous one—humility.—New York Evening Sun.

Highly Dramatic

Backward and forward he paced, his eyes wild and rolling, his face haggard. As the minutes passed his agitation increased.

"Will she never come? Will she never come?" he wailed wildly. "Already it is 15 minutes past the appointed time, and yet she is not here."

He pressed his hands to his fevered brow and waited. He tried to sit in vain, and still waited. He gazed sadly through the window and went on waiting.

At last! Ah! The sound of little footsteps on the stairs. He turned to the door, eager, excited.

Yes, it was she.

"You have come, then?" he gasped, dizzy with delight, as he grabbed her hat.

Yes, the stenographer had come back and it was now his turn to go out to luncheon.—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

Father's Trouble

The other day when Pa came home his face was long and grim. He looked as though his dearest hopes had all deserted him.

He didn't have a word to say, he never smiled a bit.

An' left his dinner on his plate, he never even touching it.

We looked at Ma an' wondered what it was that made him sad.

She nodded not to speak to him, for An' so we just sat there an' ate as solemn-like an' still.

As people are when some one's dead or dangerously ill.

"What is it, Pa?" asked Ma at last.

"It's all your money gone."

Whatever had occurred today to bring this sorrow on?

You went away this morning bright and cheerful. What has come so suddenly upon us all that you should be so gloom?

Pa sat an' stared at vacant space, an' didn't make reply.

He looked like somebody, Ma said, who had been hit by a train.

At last he pushed his plate away an' then said to go.

An' Ma said: "Tell me what is wrong!"

"I've simply got to know."

"Don't bother me just now," said he, "it's nothing."

"This is a trouble I alone have got to face an' bear."

"I guess I am the most discouraged man that is alive."

"On eighteen holes this afternoon I never got a drive!"

Proposals For Coal

Scaled proposals addressed to the Middlesex County Commissioners will be received by said Commissioners at the Court House, Lowell, until Monday, the nineteenth day of June, 1916 at 10 o'clock A. M. for a supply of coal to be delivered as described below, and at that time will be publicly opened and read.

All bids must be upon blank forms to be obtained at the office of the Commissioners, Court House, East Cambridge, and must give the prices proposed both in writing and in figures, and be signed by the bidder with his address.

Each bid is to be accompanied by a certified check for two hundred dollars ($200.00) payable to the County of Middlesex, said check to be returned to the bidder unless he fails to execute a contract should it be awarded to him.

A bond will be required for the faithful performance of the contract in such sums as shall be fixed by said Commissioners after the bids are opened; said sum to be not less than one-fourth nor more than one-half of the amount of the contract.

All bids will be compared on the basis of the estimated quantities of coal needed which are as follows: "New River Coal" or its equal, 2240 pounds to the ton.

20 tons, more or less, best "Lackawanna Broken" or its equal, 2240 pounds to the ton.

The above to be delivered at the Training School at North Andover, in such quantities as the Superintendent may order.

The quantities are approximate only and the Commissioners reserve the right of the increase or diminishing the same.

Specifications and forms of proposal and contract may be obtained at the office of the Commissioners, Court House, East Cambridge.

The Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids or accept any bid as they may deem best.

LADY LOOKABOUT

It is interesting to note that in the announcement by the civil service authorities in regard to the examination for school physicians soon to be held, that the positions are open to "males" only. The sex restriction introduces a new feature, and one cannot but wonder if the condition in Lowell where already there is one woman school physician prompted the restriction. There is no question that the position is one which in many respects calls for a woman physician, particularly in the high school, and the Lowell school board, always "a little ahead of the next," fully realized this demand and acted in accordance. Presumably, the current announcement effectively blocks the way to other women physicians who aspire to extend the field of their usefulness in this direction, but like many other restrictions, it bespeaks the existence somewhere of a narrow and intolerant spirit which sooner or later must give way to the inevitable advancement of woman.

Poor Spelling

It was with a sort of wicked joy we read of the poor spelling at Harvard University. A test of the spelling of the students reveals that two hundred undergraduates are so weak in this branch of English that a course has been introduced for them that they may make up on the high school level. It is pleasant to call the deficiencies of the preparatory schools, "Surely," we argue to ourselves, "if these men cannot spell how can it be expected of me," etc., etc.—you know the line. The preparatory schools in turn place the blame on the high schools, the high schools on the primaries, the primaries on the kindergartens, the kindergartens on the mothers, the mothers on "his" people, and so on indefinitely, until one is reminded of that widely-quoted old rhyme:

"Naturalists observe a flea
How smaller flies than on him prey;
And so proceed ad infinitum.

Medicinal Herbs

The full page announcement which recently appeared in the daily newspapers explaining the increase in the prices of drugs, suggests to many a new occupation, namely, drug culture. Many useful medicines are still made from common herbs, and the cutting of supplies from foreign countries has caused advances in price. Formerly, cheapness of labor or special skill enabled the foreigner to beat us on the cultivated things, and wild products are more carefully gathered by natives than by our own country population. In a recent magazine article the reader was told that there is nothing in our climate to prevent growing many staple drug plants. The Shakers in New York used to raise ginseng by the ton, and during our wars when prices were high, we have even grown opium. It has been proved that in this latitude it is possible to grow sage and thyme.

EXCESSIVE MEAT EATING

Most people who are troubled with flatulency eat more meat than is good for them. Flatulency is wind on the stomach. Excessive meat eating or defective nerve force is responsible in most cases.

Cutting down the amount of meat in your diet and taking a course of treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to strengthen the weak nerves that control the digestive processes is well worth trying if you have wind on the stomach, sour risings in the throat, a feeling of weakness in the stomach and pain in the heart. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are recommended for thin blood and weak nerves to relieve the cause. Send today to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., for the diet book, "What to Eat and How to Eat."

It gives information regarding the tonic treatment for many forms of stomach trouble. There cannot be perfect digestion without a sufficient supply of red blood and there is nothing better than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to enrich the blood and tone up the stomach.

Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be mailed, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

which have advanced in price five hundred percent; belladonna root which has advanced from twenty cents a pound to two dollars and thirty-five cents; dandelion root which has doubled, and burdock which has tripled. Just here may be a suggestion for school gardeners.

Speaking of drug culture, and the disuse and contempt into which many old-time remedies have fallen, the following article which recently appeared in a New York paper will be of timely interest:

"Fifteen years ago a group of doctors sat around a boardroom table to pass upon the fitness of things pharmacological. They were the revision committee of the pharmacopoeia, and had come together to bring that learned work up to date, deciding what should be admitted and what excluded.

Presently they came to allium. Very little time was wasted over that. It had no friends. Some of the doctors smiled charitably at the notion of allium as a curative agent and, without a dissenting voice, it was dropped—a relic of past superstition. With the passing of years and the perfection of modern alkalis, allium had become mere folklore.

Then more years went by in their old way until the scene changed to the great war and the hospitals of France, with another group of doctors as placers. France was crowded with wounded soldiers. They had to be placed wherever nurses were available. One of the peasant women in charge of wounded soldiers achieved such a high percentage of good recoveries that the doctors were attracted by her record. She seemed to be particularly successful with suppurating wounds. These doctors were true scientists, ready to learn wherever knowledge was to be found. They went to investigate her methods and discovered that she treated all her soldiers with allium. For centuries the European peasant has used allium on wounds.

This investigation led to an extensive trial of allium in the army hospitals of France and England, and strong scientific endorsement of its virtues. And thus allium bids fair to become an orthodox drug again, with a place in the pharmacopoeia. Allium is garlic!"

Expanding Skirts

The skirts continue to expand and to take to themselves pleats, gathers, and other sorts of fullness that British ladies, but it does not seem as though this fashion will have a long appeal. There is a trimness of girdle dear to the heart of every woman, and even though in the vagaries of fashion, she occasionally loses sight of it, it never is far long. The fact is that the old-time dress materials are so lavishly used that it requires about three times as much to make an up-to-date gown than it did during the period of the hobble skirt. It is not a factor in favor of or against the style of old. True to our reputation, we push from one extreme to another, and if during the transition we linger midway in the swing of the pendulum and feel that we have struck a happy medium, it is wrenched from our grasp, and we continue to approach the extreme, whose very exaggeration is its death knell.

Women's Clubs

The General Federation of Women's clubs always is of interest to women in general, and it is with unusual keenness and disinterest that they read the reports from the convention and from the various committees. Almost invariably these reports are sane, altruistic, and non-partisan, politically and religiously. They represent the ideas of intelligent and progressive women from all over the country, and when they speak, all may listen with profit. Occasionally, however, a visionary stings in among them, and it is to be regretted that the convention must stand sponsor for the utterances of such as these. It must have been some of these visionaries in the first instance, who have organized a committee who declared that women can dress not only well but with distinction at a cost of not less than $3 and not more than $10 per gown. Unfortunately for many of us, in the eyes of these women, a gown of worth is not wealth, it may appear to be gowned in $2 dresses, but as the old farmer remarked as he looked upon the giraffe at the circus, "There ain't no such animal." It is also reported from the General Federation that masculine gowns are admitted that it is possible if women decree it, to cut dress bills by one-half and even more. How the manufacturers must have laughed in their sleeves as they uttered these sentiments. No doubt many of them immediately returned to their places of business and ordered an extra width of goods in the skirts they produce, or an extra garland on the hats they trim. These speakers place themselves in the same class with those newspaper and magazine letter writers, who cause so much trouble among housewives, and imagine means who profess to manage a house and table for six or eight persons on an absurdly small amount of money. Far better, it would seem, if the home economist would instruct the women of the country to invest their money in dress goods and household furnishings which can stand up under the acid tests of time and wear. Instead of telling them they can dress not only well but with distinction at a cost of not less than $3 and not more than $10 per gown.

CONFEDERATE SERVICES

PRES. WILSON ATTENDS MEMORIAL AT CEMETERY—SEN. VARDAMAN ORATOR

WASHINGTON, June 5.—President Wilson attended memorial exercises held in the Confederate section of Arlington National cemetery here yesterday, but did not speak. His appearance was unexpected, as he previously announced he would be unable to attend. He was enthusiastically received by a large crowd.

Senator Vardaman, the orator of the occasion, defended the right of the Southern States to secede and declared the answer to the question, "Is it well that the Confederacy failed?" rested with the war the general government used its power.

Secretary Daniels occupied a seat at the speakers' platform.

CANADIAN LUMBERMEN

Liths Backwoodsmen Employed in the Forests of England—Will Not Mar Beauty of Rural Scenes

LONDON, June 5.—Expert Canadian lumbermen are gathering through many parts of England cutting down trees for the purpose of "making a battering-ram" where necessary to win the war.

These brown, lithe backwoodsmen—half-soldier and half-trapper—were

We Wonder Whether You Fully Appreciate the Extraordinary Clothes Service We Render?

We offer you the choice of the world's best clothes; Rogers-Peet's, and "Society Brand." These two makes stand at the head of all ready-to-wear clothing made in America.

brought to England from the Dominion because of their knowledge of the forests, to turn into a war asset the vast and valuable stretches of British timberland. Apart from the timber proper, which is so much in demand for military purposes, the by-products are valuable, for they include tanning bark, turpentine and pitch.

The first work of the Canadians was the marking down and surveying of certain tracks of forest land, "blazing" the trees—mainly the soft wood trees of pine and fir—and so arranging their scheme of attack that the beauties of the rural scenes would not be unnecessarily marred. With the arrival of the plants and milling machinery, lumbermen began turning out wood in all sorts of forms, from railway ties to matches.

There are still left in England two and a half million acres of forest, the

CHIMPANZEE AND DOG

STRANGE BOND OF AFFECTION BETWEEN TWO MASCOTS OF BARNUM & BAILEY MENAGERIE

They're an oddly matched pair, but sweethearts nevertheless.

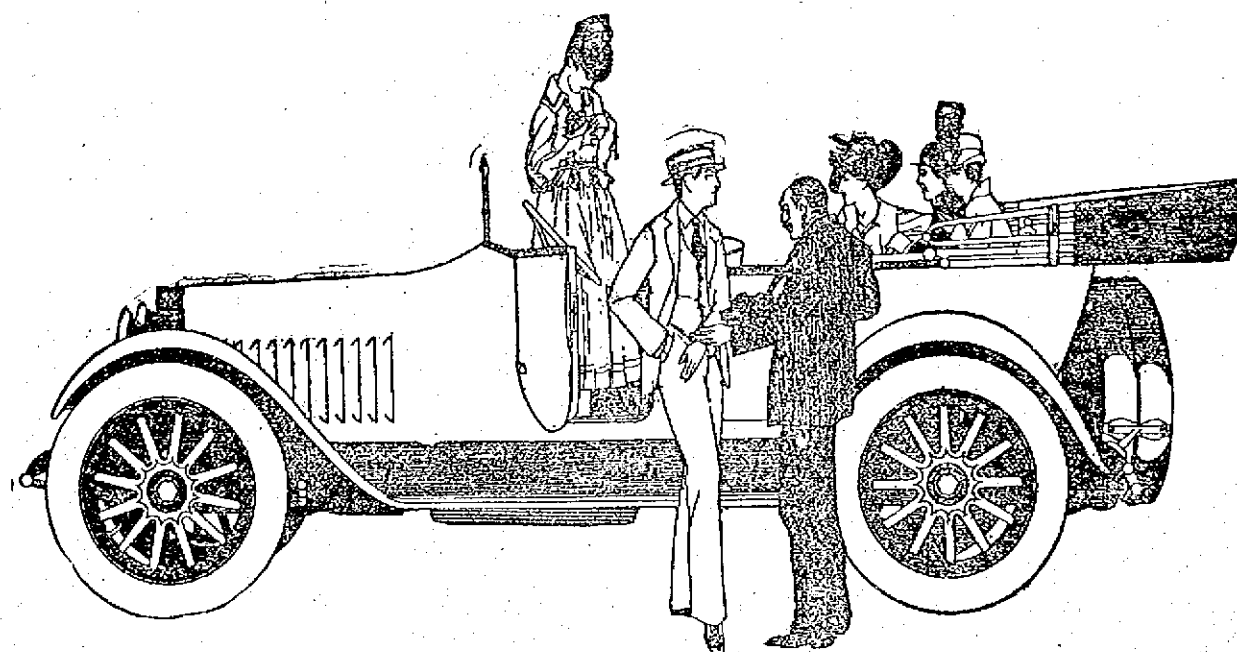

"Chubb" is the chimpanzee's name and "Fluff" is the name of the little white dog that the monkey holds in its arms. "Chubb" is the clown of the Barnum & Bailey Menagerie and his official mission in life is to cut funny capers for the edification of the big family of wild animals coming to Lowell, on Friday, June 23, with the "greatest show on earth."

"Fluff" is also a real circus performer, having been a member of a troupe of trained dogs and ponies which for several seasons was featured on the Barnum & Bailey program. Finally the act disbanded and "Fluff" was adopted by the men-

Quality First

I Have a 3400 r. p. m. Ready This Minute For You

This certainly is a great year for selling cars. Most everybody has had success. Some more than others, as is always the case.

Chalmers sales are running 900 per cent ahead of last year all over the United States. Mr. Chalmers' foresight in doubly providing against a shortage of materials has won a great contest.

It has enabled the Chalmers plant to keep on building cars when one or two have shut down or others have had to cut down on allotments to their dealers.

Here it is June and the great Chalmers plant is running day and night, three shifts, turning out more cars than ever before.

How long can Chalmers keep filling the demand?

I don't know. I know only this: the plant is turning out about 125 a day; Chalmers dealers are selling about 425 a day.

The only reason I or any other dealer can supply a car now is because during December, January and February the Chalmers plant worked day and night like Trojans and built about 125 cars a day when the dealers were selling probably only about 80. Soon these 425-a-day sales are going to eat up the surplus made during the Winter months.

I got a letter a few days ago from the Chalmers plant which simply said: "We have on hand orders asking for immediate shipment of cars whose value is in excess of $8,000,000."

I need not narrate the rest of the note which was so obviously subtle that I got the telegraph operators on the job right off.

I'm making my promises on delivery from day to day. I've got cars or can get them now. This may not hold good tomorrow.

Next week I shall cut my promises down still more. Remember, there are only two things that I concern myself with these days. One is to get you to take one ride in a 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers if you have not done so already. That's all I want. The car speaks in a language you'll understand.

The other thing is simply one of mathematics: If the Chalmers factory can turn out 125 cars a day and Chalmers dealers all over the United States are selling 425 a day, how long will the supply last?

Price still unchanged—$1090 Detroit.
